Massive distribution of ex gratia Karnataka's excess deaths will strain finances, says Centre

COVID-19 pandemic not a one-time disaster, broader approach needed, it tells SC

KRISHNADAS RAJAGOPAL NEW DELHI

The COVID-19 pandemic is not a "one-time disaster", such as an earthquake or a flood for which victims can be compensated with just money, the Centre told the Supreme Court.

It is an ongoing pandemic, which will continue to attack in waves. A "broader approach" is essential. The government was responding to petitions in the Supreme Court to pay ₹4 lakh compensation to the families of every COVID-19 victim.

"Unlike disasters of a short and finite duration, occurring and ending quickly, COVID-19 is a global pandemic which has affected all the countries in the world. The pandemic has claimed more than 3.85 lakh lives, a number which is likely to infurther... These crease deaths have affected families from all classes - the rich and poor, professionals and informal workers, traders and farmers..." the Ministry of Home Affairs, represented by Additional Solicitor General Aishwarya Bhati, said in a 189-page affidavit.

Limiting relief to monetary pay-offs was a "narrow and pedantic approach". There was also no precedent of giving ex gratia compensation for a disease or disaster

Undercount factor of fatalities in Bengaluru is 2.3, show data

SHARATH S. SRIVATSA SRINIVASAN RAMANI BENGALURU/ CHENNAI

The number of "excess deaths" registered by the Civil Registration System (CRS) in Karnataka ever since the COVID-19 pandemic hit (from April 2020 to May 2021) was 1,67,788, which is 5.8 times the official reported figure of 29,090 deaths for the same period.

This high number was largely due to the deaths registered in April 2021 (46,000) and May 2021 (77,000 and still being reconciled).

In this period, which coincided with the second CO-VID-19 wave, the excess deaths were around 53,728, compared to the registered COVID-19 tally of 16,523, leading to an undercount factor of 3.25.

The overall COVID-19 tally in Karnataka as of June 19 is 33,763. Excess deaths in Karwere calculated based on the month-wise number of deaths registered by the CRS (provisional figures) from January 2015 to May 2021, which were accessed by The Hindu. Not all excess deaths would be due to COVID-19 but a bulk of them would be related to it during the pandemic.

corresponding CRS figures for the Bruhat Bengaluru Mahanagara Palike (BBMP) (the Greater Bengaluru metropolitan area).

CRS registered The 40,264 and 75,441 deaths (till May) in 2020 and 2021 respectively in the area, which accounted for 31,029 estimated excess deaths, compared to the baseline mortality of the pre-pandemic period (2015-2019). However, the BBMP's official tally till May 2021 was only 13,296. This adds up to an undercount factor in the city limits of 2.33, which is lower than that of Chennai Other cities such as Hyde-

Mufti holds off decision on meeting PM Modi

Mehbooba Mufti

PEERZADA ASHIQ SRINAGAR

Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) president Mehbooba Mufti chaired a meeting of the party's Political Affairs Committee (PAC) in Srinagar on Sunday, following the Union Home Secretary's invitation to 14 Jammu and Kashmir leaders for a meeting with Prime Minister Narendra Modi next week.

The PAC decided that Ms. Mufti would take a call on meeting Mr. Modi after a meeting of the Gupkar alliance, scheduled for Tuesday.

"All members of the Political Affairs Committee shared their inputs on engaging with the Centre. It was unanimously decided that Ms. Mufti will be authorised to take a final call during her meeting with members of the Gupkar alliance [People's Alliance for Gupkar Declaration]," PDP spokesman Suhail Bukhari said.

Sources said Ms. Mufti is for nominating National Conference (NC) president Farooq Abdullah as the Gupkar alliance leader to meet the Prime Minister on June 24 in Delhi.

Dr. Abdullah held consultations with senior NC leaders, including general secretary Ali Mohammad Sagar and provincial president of Kashmir Nasir Aslam Wani.

'More than 65 lakh inoculated so far'

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

The Capital recorded 124 new COVID-19 cases and seven deaths on Sunday along with 398 recoveries, according to a health bulletin issued by the Delhi government.

It added that 72,670 tests has been conducted with a positivity rate of 0.17%. Of the total tests conducted, 52,790 were RT-PCR tests. There are 2,091 actives cases in the Capital of which 600 are under home isolation.

The total number of cases since the pandemic began now stands at 14,32,292 along with 24,914 deaths.

While presenting the vaccination bulletin, AAP leader Atishi said more than 65 lakh people have been vaccinated in Delhi, of which, 49.38 lakh people have been given the first dose and 15.75 lakh people have been given both the doses. Currently, 8.25 lakh vaccines are available in Delhi for 45 and above age group, out of which, five days of Covaxin and 57 days

Crime Branch busts unit manufacturing fake drugs

10 people, including two doctors, held

STAFF REPORTER

The Crime Branch of the Delhi Police busted a unit manufacturing fake drugs meant for treatment of COVID-19 and black fungus patients and arrested 10 people, including two doctors, officials on Sunday.

The medicines were being black-marketed through WhatsApp, they said. The police said, "The big crackdown on black-marketing of fake "injections" used as lifesaving drugs in COVID and black fungus led to arrest of 10 people, including two doctors".

According to the police, one of the accused, Mayank Taluja (25), worked as a CO-VID volunteer for two-three months and came in contact with a salesman named Waseem Khan who worked at Al Khidmat Medicos. Soon, Taluja started advertising his mobile number on various WhatsApp groups that injectable drugs for the treatment of black fungus disease were available with him, they said. On June 17, the Drug Control department notified the police that Taluja was involved in black marketing of drugs meant for the treatment of black fungus patients.

The police then arrested Waseem Khan from the Jamia metro station area where he had come to deliver Liposomal Amphotericin-B drug meant for black fungus patient. Based on his disclosure, Al Khidmat Medicos was raided and 10 more vials of Liposomal Amphotericin-B were recovered. The owner of Al Khidmat Medicos, Shoib Khan and his two salesmen Mohd Faizal Yaseen and Afzal were also apprehended, police said. Police said Taluja was also apprehended when he came to Medicos, said DCP (Crime) Monika Bhardwaj.

An officer said from the recovered articles, sample of five drugs were drawn by the Inspector of the Drug Department and sent for examinations. A laptop with images of printing material of these drugs, two high-quality printing machines and raw material used for printing labels were also seized from the premises, the officer

However, the jail administration said that they are making all possible efforts to keep the inmates safe and have been following all CO-VID-related protocols.

"It is tough to maintain hygiene and COVID protocols in such a congested space. However, inmate wards are regularly sanitised and senior citizens are kept in separate wards for safety," said the officer.

HC not to interfere with order to 'live-in partner'

Woman moved petition in local court

STAFF REPORTER

The Delhi High Court has declined to interfere with a lower court's interim decision to order a married man to pay ₹10,000 per month as maintenance to a woman with whom he allegedly had a live-in relationship for over six years.

Man's contention

The court's direction came even as the man contended that the woman, when they met way back in 2009, knew that he was married to somebody else, which barred her from claiming any relief under the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence (DV) Act.

"The question as to whether the respondent [woman] herein has been duped by the petitioner (man) or whether she was a party to an adulterous and bigamous relationship or not and whether her conduct would not entitle her for any protection under the DV Act can be determined only after the evidence is led," Justice Subramonium settled.

The case stems from a complex set of circumstances, which began with an application moved last year by the woman before a local court under the DV Act, seeking grant of interim maintenance.

'If over 20 people wish to learn yoga, govt. will give them free instructor'

CM inaugurates Centre for Meditation and Yoga Sciences

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal on Sunday said yoga helps in cultivating high immunity and could not only help preventing people from getting COVID but also in dealing with post-CO-VID complications.

He was speaking at the inauguration of the Delhi government's Centre for Meditation and Yoga Sciences that has been set up in collaboration with the Delhi Pharmaceutical Sciences and Research University (DPSRU).

"The psychological and emotional needs aggravate quite a lot post-COVID. Hence, exercise and meditation are key to fighting the infection. COVID affects our lungs the most. For patients who have recovered from the virus, if we teach pranayama to them then they will benefit from it. In the COVID crisis, Yoga has a significant role to play in our lives," Mr. Kejriwal said.

The Chief Minister said it has been his dream to make yoga reach each and every house of Delhi and a specific budget was allotted for the purpose.

"If a group of more than 20 people call up, saying that they wish to learn Yoga, then the government shall provide an instructor to them for free. I felt that this is the easiest way to drive our people towards yoga and provide them the means to practice it," Mr. Kejriwal said.

He added that by October 2, the government would be in a situation to provide instructors free-of-cost.

Deputy Chief Minister Manish Sisodia said the government has started training around 450 yoga and meditation instructors, who in three months, will be able to go to different regions to teach people.

HC appoints retd. judge as observer to conduct election for V-P of DCI

STAFF REPORTER

The Delhi High Court has directed the Dental Council of India (DCI) to forthwith hold election for the post of vicepresident under the watch of a court-appointed observer.

Justice Amit Bansal said: "To carry out the process of holding of election in a smooth manner, I appoint Justice G.S. Sistani, retired judge of this court, as an observer".

"Justice G.S. Sistani will consult with the Secretary and the members of the Executive Committee of the respondent no.2 (DCI) council to carry out the modalities of the election process, including but not limited to holding elections virtually and the notices to be sent to the members of the council and will oversee the conduct of the elections," the court ordered.

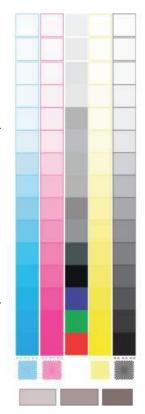

The order came while hearing a petition challenging a May 11, 2021 order of the Centre appointing Ashok Khandelwal to discharge the functions of president of the DCI with immediate effect.

Justice Bansal declined to interfere with the appointment of Dr. Khandelwal noting that the May 11 order only provides that he shall discharge the functions of President of DCI till election takes place for the post.

"I see nothing wrong in respondent no.1 appointing someone to perform functions of the president on a temporary basis," the court said but added that it was "inclined to maintain the democratic functioning" of

"It is essential that institutions like the respondent no.2 (DCI) council, that perform important public functions, continue to retain their democratic character. After all, democratic values are the essence of our society and elections are the bedrock of democracy," the court remarked.

If you have lived through the result seasons of the Class 10 and 12 board exams, you know what a mark obsessive culture

In theory, marks indicate a student's unbiased performance; but, in practice, it tells very little about the person. At best, it informs how well the student has remembered the content within a time limit. Researches tell a different story.

The grading culture

Three decades ago, Ruth Butler explores three types of feedback: scores alone, comments alone, and scores with comments. It turned out that those who received scores alone either became complacent if they had performed well, or were unmotivated if they did badly. Students who received scores with comments focused more on scores, and not the comments. The third group who received comments alone significantly improved their performance

Of late, neuroscientists have been questioning our understanding of exams and unified grading.

In an article last year, neuroscientist Jared Horvath and educator David Bott said that the practice of marks and grades inflates some aspects of reality. And we all do not see reality in the same way. In a 2012 meta-analysis of around 800 studies by John Hattie, students' self-assessment emerged as the most likely effective intervention, and not an externally validated score.

Competition is touted as the main reason behind exams and grading. Contrarily, the works of Alfie Kohn in the last three decades have shown that competition in education re-

Then, why do we depend on traditional exams and marks? Marks are convenient to measure and plot in a bell curve making it comparable for educators and employers. We pretend the process is transparent and fair but the core reason remains convenience, not learning improvement.

By reducing learning to an average of marks, we ignore the richness of feedback and rigorous iterations required in authentic learning. While marks tangibilise the abstract like learning through exams, we mistake it for assessment.

Assessment alternatives There are ways to assess the students without exams. Students need personalised assessments for improvements, ≝ not judgemental marks. So, ĕ what are those alternatives?

Apply collaborative methods such as cooperative experiences, peer reviews, and simulations. Adopt portfolios and a variety of writing practices. Use qualitative rubrics with detailed comments, instead of numerical rubrics. Craft Open Methods such as open-net and take-home examinations. Then, the student becomes more transparent, and understands success more flexibly and contextually. The idea is to converse regularly with the students on their progress and construct their own learning.

Exams and marks, as the core of the educational practice, are overrated. They are prescriptive, unfortunate, unviable, and unnecessary for the future world. As the hangover of the Industrial Age. they are rooted in archaic carrots and sticks. We need alternative evaluation methods. To begin with, if we permit and support our teachers and students to go beyond the traditional tests and experiment with internal assessments, there can be a dawn of alternative forms of evaluations. This is a demanding yet practical proposition. The evolving domain of evaluation science can aid this.

Marks should neither be the driver nor the target of learning. At best, they may be a byproduct of learning. As Joe Martin says, no teacher has ever had a former student return to say that an exam conducted by the teacher changed his life.

Odisha govt. targets 3 lakh jabs per day

STAFF REPORTER

The Odisha government has directed all districts and civic body authorities to achieve 3 lakh vaccinations per day.

As the Centre is revising the vaccine strategy from June 21 and has offered to supply vaccines to the State based on rate of consumption and wastage, more vaccine doses are likely to be available for disposal.

Since January 16, the State has administered 93.73 lakh doses. However, only 17.97 lakh citizens have received two doses.

"The average daily coverage is less than 1.5 lakh doses across the State. The vaccination drive must be expanded in all blocks and urban local bodies from June 21," said Pradipta Mohapatra, Additional Chief Secretary (Health).

We are not encroachers but victims, say Khori Basti residents

SC had ordered demolition of the illegal colony on forest land

ASHOK KUMAR FARIDABAD

The husband and son of Bimlesh, a 48-year-old resident of Khori Basti here, had been in and out of work for a year now due to the pandemic. Pushed to a hand-to-mouth existence, the family, owning a small home in the colony, however, never had to worry about rent. But soon, arranging the rent every month could be their biggest concern once their home is demolished in adherence to a Supreme Court order.

The woman and her husband, a private security guard, had borrowed money from their relatives and put all their life's savings to buy the plot for around ₹3 lakh a decade ago. The couple was happy to finally have a roof court order earlier this month to demolish the illegal houses in the forest area has turned their world upside down.

"The people in the basti have lost their sleep and appetite over the fear of demolition. Just when the lockdown was being lifted and the people were gradually getting back to work, the administration pasted notices asking us to vacate our homes. Most of the people have been without work in the colony for a year now and are not left with any savings. The third wave of the coronavirus is around the corner. We don't have enough to even rent a room. Where does the administration expect us to go in this situation?," asked Bimlesh, in a choking voice.

'No money'

Echoing her views, Nema Devi, sitting next to her, added that many had take rooms on rent in the neighbouring areas and shifted their expensive belongings such as refrigerators and television sets, and staying put in the colony with bare minimum essentials. She said rooms were hard to find and the landlords were quoting exorbitant rents

- ranging from ₹6,000-₹7,000 - to take advantage of the situation. "It is very difficult for us to arrange this money since we have been out of work for almost a year," said Ms. Devi.

The residents said the local administration had been making regular announcements asking them to vacate and two deadlines for demolition -June 9 and 15 - had already expired. The next deadline, said the residents, is June 21. "We have heard of at least three deaths connected with the demolition so far. While two people died by suicide out of fear of demolition, one suffered a heart attack," claimed Bimlesh.

The residents said the power connections to their homes were snapped a week ago and now even water tankers were not being allowed inside the colony. Mukesh, a rickshawpuller, said the residents were fetching water from neighbouring Prahaladpur in bottles and bucket for their daily need. "There are children, elderly and pregnant women in the colony. It is really getting difficult for them to survive without power and water," he

The local property dealers with political clout allegedly sold plots to the residents, mostly migrants working as rickshaw-pullers, guards, auto-rickshaw drivers, plumbers and masons. with powers of attorney and the promise of basic amenities. Saddam Hussain, a plumber, said he bought the plot hoping that it would also be regularised like Sangam Vihar in Delhi. "The plots were available at affordable rates. We are poor people. We could not get land at such cheap rates at any other place in the National Capital Region. So we bought a plot in partnership with my brother for ₹5 lakh," said Mr. Hussain. He, however, blamed the administration for allowing the colony to develop on forest land and not doing anything to stop it for two decades.

'None came to rescue' "Be it the local police, the forest department officials or the civic body staff, all would come to us seeking bribe to allow construction. It was this 'consent' of the government officials which made us feel even more confident that our homes were safe. The property dealers also provided us power connections through private meters and would charge ₹14-₹15 per unit," said Pawan, a mason. He said local politicians would come to them seeking votes during election, but no one had come to their rescue in this hour of crisis.

'Rehabilitate us'

Faced with the threat of losing all their life's savings in a single stroke, the residents are now demanding that action must be taken against the land mafia for duping them into buying forest land and that they be rehabilitated. "We have not encroached upon the land. We have bought it. We have been duped. We are victims. The government should bail us out and rehabilitate us. We are ready to be shifted to any corner of the city, but not rendered homeless," pleaded Mukesh.

The Naveen Patnaik Government on Sunday launched a special scheme, Ashirvad, under which ₹2,500 will be given every month to children who have lost their parents.

Under the comprehensive package announced by the State government, beneficiaries have been divided into three categories children who have lost both parents, loss of a single parent or loss of earning parent.

"The State government is committed to providing a safe environment for holistic development of these children who need special care of the society," said Chief Minister Naveen Patnaik here on Sunday.

The State government would encourage relatives to take care of children who have lost their parents.

Bhagidari Sankalp Morcha will counter BJP: SBSP chief

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

The president of the Suheldev Bharatiya Samaj Party (SBSP), Om Prakash Rajbhar, on Sunday said that he is trying to bring Trinamool Congress chief Mamata Banerjee, Aam Aadmi Party convener Arvind Kejriwal and Shiv Sena president Uddhav Thackeray on a common platform, and form an effective front to counter the BJP.

The SBSP had contested the 2017 Uttar Pradesh Assembly elections in alliance with the BJP but later parted ways.

The Assembly polls in Uttar Pradesh are slated for early next year.

Meeting with AAP leader "Yesterday, I met AAP leader and Rajya Sabha MP Sanjay Singh, and his approach was positive. He has given in-principle approval to be a part of the Bhagidari Sankalp Morcha. The final decision about joining the Morcha will be taken by Mr. Kejriwal. In this regard, there will be a meeting with Om Prakash Rajbhar.

Mr. Kejriwal in Delhi next week," Mr. Rajbhar told

When asked whether Mr. Kejriwal was ready to join the Morcha despite the presence of Asaduddin Owaisi's AIMIM, the SBSP chief said, "The need of the hour is to stop the BJP. If the BJP can join hands with Mehbooba Mufti, then Mr. Kejriwal and Mr. Owaisi too can come on the same platform to stop the BJP."

'TMC and Shiv Sena'

Mr. Rajbhar said, "My effort will be to bring TMC chief Ms. Banerjee and Shiv Sena president Mr. Thackeray on a platform, and form an effective front to counter the

The SBSP chief said he has already held talks with Shiv Sena leader Saniav Raut and a general secretary of the TMC.

Mr. Raut's visit

"Mr. Raut is likely to visit Lucknow soon, and decisive talks in this regard will be held with him," Mr. Rajbhar said.

In the 2017 Assembly elections, the SBSP contest ed eight seats and won four. Mr. Rajbhar was made a Cabinet Minister but he resigned later.

Policemen in net as anti-drug drive intensifies

25 of them booked in Arunachal

RAHUL KARMAKAR

In May 2020, the police in Arunachal Pradesh's West Kameng district arrested a Postmaster named Kalido Pertin for providing ₹1.15 lakh to procure 12.5 gm of heroin from Assam's Tezpur. They also arrested an Indian Reserve Battalion constable who helped two drug-traffickers cross the Bhalukpong check gate on the Arunachal Pradesh-Assam border.

The arrests confirmed what the State government had been suspecting for a long time – drug addiction among government employees. This culminated in the Pema Khandu government asking its employees to report their addiction to senior officers by July 31 this year for a rehabilitation programme, or face legal ac-

But the anti-drug drive in the State since May has led the security forces to their own. Less than a fortnight ago, Home Minister Bamang Felix said 25 out of 143 people booked in 100 drug-related cases were police personnel, two of whom have been dismissed from service.

"Some police personnel in districts such as West Kameng, Papum Pare, Lower Subansiri, East Siang, Namsai, Changlang and Tirap are under the scanner," he said almost a week after two Indian Reserve Battalion personnel posted in Arunachal Pradesh were arrested by the Assam police near the inter-State border.

Constable peddles drug

On June 13, a constable named Chillong Techi was arrested in Arunachal Pradesh's Naharlagun with two others on suspicion of drugpeddling. The police recovered 68.24 gm of suspected heroin from them.

More people were arrested after the constable confessed to having misused his uniform to peddle drugs into Naharlagun and State capital Itanagar from a kingpin operating from Banderdewa bordering Assam.

Among the first persons in uniform to have been arrested this year for allegedly facilitating drug-trafficking was Sub-Inspector Musaddique Hussain of the Assam police's Special Branch. Two drug dealers arrested from a Guwahati hotel in March had squealed about him.

Haryana govt. extends curbs till June 28

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA CHANDIGARH

The Harvana government on Sunday extended the COVID-19 lockdown in the State by another week till June 28, but eased restrictions imposed on weddings and funerals, and allowed corporate offices to operate with full attendance.

According to an order issued by Chief Secretary Vijai Vardhan, up to 50 guests can now attend weddings and funerals or cremations, up from 21 earlier, subject to strict observance of CO-VID-19-appropriate behaviour and social distancing.

Corporate offices can now open with full attendance but there has to be strict observance of social distancing, COVID-19-appropriate behaviour and regular sanitisation, it said.

Weddings can now take place in courts but processions are not allowed, the order said.

It, however, said swimming pools and spas in the State would continue to remain closed.

Club houses, restaurants and bars of golf courses are allowed to open with 50% seating capacity from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., it added.

a.m. to 9 p.m. Most of the bars reopened on Sunday but parks, gyms and sports venues could open from Monday. Charminar and Salarjung Museum reopened on Sunday.

Metro passengers were asked to strictly follow CO-VID-19 guidelines.

After 55 days, transport corporations in Karnataka and Bangalore Metro Rail were set to resume services. "Like last year, all protocols to contain the spread of CO-VID-19 will be followed," said Shankar A.S., executive director (operations and maintenance), BMRCL. Trains will run during the peak hours (7 a.m. to 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.) every five minutes.

In a bid to make it easier for commuters, BMTC has extended the validity of monthly passes.

BMTC will run 2,000 buses on major routes, besides 17 Vayu Vajra buses to Kempegowda International Airport. QR- code based system will be provided for tickets.

KSRTC, which will operate 3,000 buses initially, will not run local and inter-district services in Mysuru district and Dakshina Kannada.

Karnataka has allowed all shops to open and restaurants to allow dine-in at 50% occupancy from Monday, but the industry could take a week to fully open up.

Shortage of labour, as many who had returned to their hometowns were yet to return posed a problem. "Since there was no guarantee on when we would be allowed to re-open, we did not get employees back. While Karnataka has eased restrictions, it may not be the case in other States," said Chandrashekhar Hebbar, president, Karnataka Regional Hotels and Restaurants Federation. However, smaller shops will mostly open up on Monday.

Vaccination worry

The other concern for businesses was vaccination for their workforce. People in the hospitality industry were considered frontline workers and nearly 50% received the first dose, industry sources said. However, that was not the case with traders and proprietors of small shops.

Manu Chandra, head of Bengaluru Chapter of National Restaurants Association of India, said the present guidelines occupancy rate, the 5 p.m. deadline to close operations, weekend lockdown and ban on serving liquor for diningin - would make things difficult for recovery.

Forecast for Monday: Heavy rainfall very likely at isolated places over Bihar, Jharkhand, sub-Himalavan West Bengal, Sikkim, Assam, Meghalaya, Goa, coastal Karnataka, Tamil Nadu, Puduch-Agarta Ahmed Aizawl

Auto driver freed in IISc. attack case

No evidence of Habib's involvement in the 2005 terrorist firing, says NIA court

K.V. ADITYA BHARADWAJ

Habib Mohammed, 41, an auto driver from Agartala, Tripura, is back home after an ordeal that spanned over four years.

In 2017, he was arrested in connection with the 2005 Indian Institute of Science (IISc.) terror attack case. He spent four years and three months in the city prison only to be discharged from the case on June 14, 2021.

It was on December 28, 2005, that two men in Army fatigues opened fire on the IISc campus in Bengaluru, killing a professor and injuring four others. The National Investigation Agency (NIA) Special Court in its order discharging Mr. Mohammed from the case pointed to lack of credible evidence of his involvement

The judge said "he failed to understand why he was arraigned as an accused in the case".

"I have never been a fundamentalist and have never been involved in any terror activities," Mr. Mohammed told this correspondent from Agartala on phone.

"Nearly 12 years after the alleged attack, the police suddenly arrested me, calling me a terrorist. My family suffered without a breadwinner for over four years. The

His counsel Mohammed Tahir described the events as a "complete travesty of justice." "An innocent person had to spend over four years in jail for no reason. We welcome the court granting relief," the counsel said. Mr. Mohammed was arrested on the basis of a confession statement of one of the accused, Sabahuddin, to the Lucknow police in 2008. He reportedly claimed that Mr. Mohammed helped him and other conspirators cross over to Bangladesh after the IISc. attack.

NIA Special Court judge Kasappa Naik rejected an alleged confession statement of Mr. Mohammed in police custody as evidence and also pointed out that the prosecution had failed to gather any corroborative evidence to support the claims in the statement as well

53 people get notice in gold smuggling case

Swapna, Sivasankar among accused

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

The Customs Deprtment, probing the Kerala gold smuggling case, has issued show-cause notices to 53 people, including prime accused Swapna Suresh, suspended IAS officer M. Sivasankar and two former diplomats in the UAE consulate, Thiruvananthapuram, official sources said.

The notices asking why action under the Customs Act should not be taken against them were issued by Customs (Preventive) Commissioner Sumit Kumar on June 16. They have been given 30 days to reply.

The case against them involves smuggling of a total of 167 kg of gold 23 times, including the illegal trade of 30 kg gold worth nearly ₹15 crore that was seized by the Customs at the Thiruvananthapuram Airport from a diplomatic bag in July 2020.

Shiv Sena's Sanjay Raut takes jibe at Congress on contesting polls alone

Without naming it, he says such parties must first come out of their own confusion

SHOUMOJIT BANERJEE

Stating that the Shiv Sena was always ready for an electoral battle at any given time, party MP and spokesperson Sanjay Raut, in a thinly veiled jibe at coalition ally Congress, said that such parties must first emerge out of their confusion and then decide whether or not to contest polls alone.

"Some political parties in Maharashtra are speaking of fighting polls on their own. That is their lookout. But let there be no confusion on this count. One leader [State Congress chief Nana Patole] of that party says that it will fight on its own, while other leaders of that party say the opposite. So, such parties must first come out of their own confusion and then talk about how to fight the election," Mr. Raut said, in a stinging riposte to the Congress without naming the

As far as the Shiv Sena was concerned, Mr. Raut said that the party's chief and Chief Minister Uddhav Thackeray, in his address to party workers on the occasion of the party's 55th foundation day on Saturday, had clearly spoken on the saffron party's self-reliance and its ability to fight the elections Mr. Raut's remarks, which follows a day after Mr. Thackeray's potshots at the Congress, come in the wake of Mr. Patole's recent statements hinting that his party could go it alone in the 2024 Assembly election and are indicative of the inherent friction within the ruling tripartite Maha Vikas Aghadi coalition of the Sena, the Congress and the Nationalist Congress Party (NCP). In a recent address to party workers, Mr. Patole had further expressed Chief Ministerial ambitions by urging party workers to get the Congress on the top in the next State election which would enable him to be CM.

On Saturday, Mr. Thackeray slammed the Congress' talk of 'going it alone', saying that people would reject those who spoke only of contesting elections alone without offering solutions to people's problems.

"If a party says that it wants to contest elections on its own without joining hands with others, it should first generate confidence among the public of its ability to provide jobs," the Chief Minister had said.

Deputy Chief Minister Ajit

Earlier, NCP leader and Pawar had rebuked Mr. Patole's Chief Ministerial aspirations as well, stating that while there was nothing wrong in someone expressing their desire to become CM, the magic figure of 145 MLAs was imperative to become one.

Nana Patole's riposte to Sena: MVA alliance not permanent fixture

Its objective was to stop BJP, says Maharashtra Congress chief

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

After Chief Minister Uddhav Thackeray and Shiv Sena spokesperson Sanjay Raut indirectly criticised the Sena's coalition ally, the Congress, for its talk of contesting polls alone, Maharashtra Congress chief Nana Patole on Sunday said that the tripartite Maha Vikas Aghadi (MVA) alliance comprising the Sena, the NCP, and the Congress, was for a period of five years and not a permanent fixture.

"We formed this alliance (in 2019) for a period of five years [till the next Assembly election] with the objective of stopping the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP)... This is a not a permanent state of af-

On Saturday, Mr. Thackeray, in his capacity as president of the Shiv Sena and speaking on the occasion of the party's 55th Foundation Day, took a thinly veiled jibe at the Congress by saying that the public would "beat with footwear" those [parties] who only talked about contesting polls alone without offering concrete solutions to people's problems. Mr. Patole, however, refused to be drawn into making a direct riposte at Mr. Thackeray's comments, remarking that there was "no clarity" in Mr. Thackeray's speech as to which party he was referring to. "Even the BJP has spoken of contesting elections independently while previously, all the four major parties – the Congress, NCP, BJP and Sena – had contested the local bodies and Assembly polls independently," the Congress chief said.

Hope and promise

The Centre's move to engage with the political leadership in Kashmir is welcome

ignalling a revival of the political process in Jammu and Kashmir, Prime Minister Narendra Modi has decided to meet 14 party leaders from the Union Territory on June 24. Mr. Modi's outreach is taking place nearly two years after the State of Jammu and Kashmir was stripped of its special constitutional status and dismembered into two Union Territories through an unprecedented exercise of the Centre's powers. This demonstrates a desirable flexibility in his approach towards resolving the Kashmir issue. Considering the absence of an agenda for the meeting and the prevailing sense of betrayal among Kashmiris, any hope of a quick resolution to the frozen political questions is not realistic. Discontinuing the special status of Kashmir was a core agenda of Hindutva nationalism for decades, which was achieved after the second parliamentary victory of Mr. Modi in 2019. There has been a concerted campaign to undermine political parties and leaders of the Valley by the BJP and the Centre. Since 2014, the BJP has worked under a premise that the PDP and NC were impediments, not facilitators, to a solution in Kashmir. The BJP's short-lived alliance with PDP, far from building bridges, created more hostility between the parties and de-legitimised both in the eyes of the public. The leaders of mainstream parties, including former Chief Ministers, were jailed after 2019. The Centre's idea to incubate a loyal political class made little progress.

The political environment has changed, meanwhile. The Joe Biden administration is eager to end the U.S. entanglement in Afghanistan and resist China's attempts to dominate the world. India is in a stand-off with China on the border. The Biden administration is publicly disapproving of India's Kashmir policy, while wanting to strategically embrace it. Pakistan is trying to reclaim its strategic advantage. The mishandling of the COVID-19 pandemic has dented India's global image and triggered new political challenges domestically. All these make rigidity less rewarding in India's Kashmir policy. All the same, by creating an opportunity to explore a way forward, the Centre has acted wisely, regardless of its reasons. It must engage the political parties in good faith and with an open mind. Kashmir's governance challenges are not managerial, and corruption investigations, legitimate as they may be, must not be used to debase politics itself. Efforts to tackle corruption and pilferage should not amount to furthering instability in J&K. The Centre appears to have done some groundwork, though it has not revealed any plans yet. The meeting must be a beginning towards a durable and democratic resolution of the Kashmir question and not an exercise in managing the Centre's image.

The rise of Raisi

The new President should use his clout to push for economic, political reforms in Iran

7ith the election of Ebrahim Raisi, a hardline cleric, as Iran's President, the Islamic Repuon all institutions of power – the military, Parliament, the judiciary, and the presidency. In Iran's unique political system, effectively controlled by the Supreme Leader, Presidents, who run the day-to-day affairs, have an important role to play. In the past, the country had seen tensions between moderate/reformist Presidents and the Supreme Leader. While the reformists, a powerful constituency, have pushed for gradual reforms by rallying behind leaders like Mohammad Khatami and Hassan Rouhani, the conservatives always pushed back. In this tussle for power, Mr. Raisi has been the popular face of the establishment for years. He had contested the 2017 presidential elections, but lost to Mr. Rouhani, who was seeking a second term. Believed to be close to Supreme Leader Ali Khamenei, Mr. Raisi was appointed the Chief Justice in 2019, which kept him in the top echelons of power till the presidential elections. There were allegations that the June 18 election was rigged in favour of Mr. Raisi even before the first ballot was cast. The Guardian Council, which vets potential candidates, had rejected almost all major reformists, leaving him the only prominent figure on the ballot. This led to opposition activists calling for an election boycott, which seems to have had an impact on the voting - the turnout was 48.8%, an all-time low. Mr. Raisi won 62% of the vote, while blank ballots came second at 14%

Mr. Raisi is a controversial figure. The U.S. has accused him of serving in the "death commission" of 1989 that implemented Ayatollah Khomeini's secret decree to execute thousands of political prisoners. At home, he has presided over a harsh campaign against "corruption", which critics say had targeted political rivals. And he assumes the presidency at a time when Iran is facing daunting challenges. The revolution seems to be ageing - the country has seen protests in recent years; the push to reform the system from within, a long-time promise of the reformists, has not made much progress and the economy is in a shambles. When Mr. Rouhani won the presidency in 2013, he promised a new beginning. But his attempts to open a new chapter with the West through diplomacy were set back by Donald Trump, and his policies at home were resisted by the conservatives. Mr. Raisi, who has supported reviving the nuclear deal, might also bank on sanctions being removed to reboot the economy. And there is growing discontent in society and desperate calls for reforms and liberties. For now, Iran's tactical response to these challenges is repression. Mr. Raisi, as President, should understand that repression will not solve any of Iran's problems. A member of the clerical establishment, he should use his clout and the election victory to push for gradual economic and political reforms.

The comrades and their divergent perspectives

Russia's uncritical advocacy of China's global vision is what seems to be leaving India quite confounded ussian President Vladimir Putin has recently asserted that both the Indian Prime Minister, Narendra Modi, and the Chinese President, Xi Jinping, are "responsible" enough to solve issues between their countries, while underlining the need to debar any "extra-regional power" to interfere in the process. The implications of Mr. Putin's advice for India are numerous and far-reaching as Moscow expects New Delhi to ignominiously give up all efforts to reverse Beijing's encroachment strategies. The Russians may have their reasons to remain blind to China's growing aggressiveness, but the Indians have learned to exting effort to undermine India's global position – to destroy their confidence in themselves and the confidence of others in them and to reduce India to a state of isolation and impotence in global affairs.

The Quad factor

Mr. Putin's remarks can only be seen as reinforcing China's claim that the Quadrilateral or Quad (comprising India, the United States, Japan and Australia) is aimed at containing Beijing's influence in the Indo-Pacific region. In fact, Mr. Putin's assertion is the logical extension of views expressed by Russia's Ambassador to Îndia, Nikolay Kudashev. Sometime ago, he had advised New Delhi to take a "larger look at Chinese foreign policies", while describing the Indo-Pacific strategy as an effort to revive the Cold War mentality (https://bit.ly/3gLOVBY). Russia's Foreign Minister, Sergey Lavrov, has frequently, and quite acerbically, lashed out at the Quad.

Notwithstanding the cataclysmic changes in the global and regional politico-security environment, India has been able to maintain amicable ties with Russia. Yet, Russia's continued criticism of the Indo-Pacific and the Quad give ample evidence of the divergent perspectives of New Delhi and Russia on how to deal with China's rise to global prominence. Russia has rejected the Indo-Pacific construct in favour of the Asia-Pacific on the ground that the first is primarily an American initiative designed to contain both China

Obviously, India thinks otherwise since Russia's simplistic advice is not sagacious enough to solve its China problem. India's External Affairs Minister, S. Jaishankar, in a virtual discussion with his Australian and French counterparts, had recently asserted that no country can have a veto on India's participation in the Quad (https://bit.ly/3cXDDaV). This assertion was an indirect counterpoise to what Mr. Lavrov had termed the Quad – as "Asian NA-TO". In an unmistakable indication of India's attempt to reimagine a new geostrategic maritime role for itself, Mr. Jaishankar had further observed that incorporation of the Indo-Pacific concept in Indian diplomacy means that India can no longer be confined between the Malacca Strait and Gulf of Aden.

Though the recent diplomatic romance between Russia and Pakistan has generated some unease in India, it is Russia's uncritical advocacy of China's global vision that seems to have left New Delhi overly confounded. For many policymakers and people in our country, the Russian attitude toward China's growing power and influence will be the touchstone of Russia's relations with India. While the Sino-Indian relationship has experienced a sharp downward trend since the Galwan clashes in June 2020, New Delhi has become particularly concerned with Moscow downplaying China's display of coercive military pressure against India. With the catastrophic rise of populist nationalism amidst the bankruptcy of globalisation, the resolution of the Sino-Indian boundary dispute appears a hopeless dream in the absence of a miracle. India is confronted in Ladakh with a situation far uglier and more recalcitrant than is generally recognised.

Beginnings of looking West

It need not be necessary to remind us again that the decade following the disintegration of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR) was a period of great turbulence in global politics. A bewildered India soon realised Russia was much weaker than the erstwhile USSR and incapable of helping New Delhi balance potential threats from Beijing. This does not mean that India completely abandoned external balancing strategies; it began to diversify its sources of external balancing. On the other hand, Russia began to cast Moscow as the leader of a supposed trilateral grouping of Russia-India-China against a U.S.-led unipolar Leaving behind the bitterness and mistrust between Moscow and Beijing during the Cold War, Russia became an early proponent of the 'strategic triangle' to bring together the three major powers. Aware of the emerging international system as an expression of western expansion, India's fear of the unipolar moment too made it easier for New Delhi to become part of this initiative. But China's dismissive attitude toward Indian capabilities, coupled with an emerging China-Pakistan nexus, prevented the success of this trilateral. India, instead, invested its diplomatic energies in rapprochement with the United States.

Unlike Russia, which tried to build an alternative international economic architecture, India decided to get integrated in the economic order it once denounced. Economic liberalisation also allowed New Delhi to buy sophisticated weapons from a wider global market that included suppliers such as Israel and France. Both were keen to sell weapons technology to India, and this also boosted New Delhi's bargaining capacity with Moscow. As the logic of intensive engagement with the West was effectively established, strategic partnership with the U.S. was a logical corollary.

India's cooperation with the U.S. has strengthened still further, in part against the perceived terrorism threat, but also in light of China's growing assertiveness whose undesirable impacts are now being felt across the world. However, Russia's ability to influence the India-China relationship has become doubtful. India has been searching for other major powers to balance against China as it does not have the sufficient means for hard balancing. Adding options to its statecraft toolbox, India has deepened its ties with Japan and Australia in a way that is close to soft balancing. Nevertheless. among all of India's balancing efforts, the stupendous growth in ties with the U.S. has been the greatest source of concern for China which views the India-U.S. rapprochement as containment.

While India needs Russia's partnership for its defence needs, New Delhi cannot endorse the Russian perspective on the Indo-Pacific and the Quad. For New Delhi, it would be self-defeating to accept that the Indo-Pacific is an American construct. With the first-ever summit of the four leaders in the 'Ouadrilateral framework' in March this year, the Quad is being formalised into a functional strategic alignment.

Maritime structures

The real 'strategic triangle' in the maritime domain will be that between New Delhi, Washington and Beijing. While other powers such as France, Australia, Japan and Russia will have an impact on the emerging maritime structures of the Indo-Pacific region, it is the triangular dynamic between India, China and the U.S. that is going to be the most consequential. Russia is yet to realise that it will gain immensely from the multilateralism that the Indo-Pacific seeks to promote, and being China's junior partner only undermines Moscow's great-power ambitions. But the Putin regime is making things unnecessarily hard for Russia as well as for India; and it is clear that those responsible for Russian policy have arrived at a flawed assessment of the current situation. As the Kremlin's policymakers are obsessively preoccupied with Russia's 'status' rivalry with the U.S., Russia's view of India-China relations seems understandable. But there is an inherent danger in permitting it to harden into a permanent attitude as an increasingly pro-Beijing Russia might adopt more aggressive blocking of India's policy agendas. That is why India is particularly interested in a normalisation of relations between Washington and Moscow as it will help it steer ties among the great powers. and also diminish Moscow's propensity to closely coordinate its South Asian policies with Beijing.

India-China ties

There is no doubt that shared identities and beliefs in the principle of non-alignment, painful memories of colonial subjugation, opgreat-power position hegemony, and strong beliefs in sovereignty and strategic autonomy have been the key influencers in shaping India's and China's engagement with each other as well as the western world. But this has begun to change as Beijing is asserting its hegemony over Asia. In such circumstances, multilateral forums such as the Russia-India-China (RIC) grouping and BRICS (Brazil, Russia, India, China and South Africa) have little practical value for Indian diplomacy. Without China's reciprocity, options before India are limited. India's concessions, whatever their form, must meet with some form of positive response from China. The response cannot be just symbolic or rhetorical. The absence of any material evidence of reciprocity is bound to doom an attempt at Sino-

Indian rapprochement. Beijing seems to be acting as though it is immune not only to the strategic consequences for its actions but also to all the conventional rules of international politics. China is undoubtedly the most powerful actor in its neighbourhood but it cannot simply have its way in shaping Asia's new geopolitics. Beijing's policies will still be constrained and altered in fundamental ways by India which cannot be expected to adopt a hopestance of remaining peripheral in its own strategic backyard.

In Kerala, the need to budget for the future

Beyond the pandemic, there are structural issues the State has to address concerning livelihoods and employment

VINOJ ABRAHAM

≠erala, under duress from the novel coronavirus pandem-⊾ic, is passing through a recessionary phase, shrinking by about 3.8% during 2019-20. Disease containment measures, including intermittent lockdowns, have stalled the livelihoods of many, probably the entire 66% of the workforce who are either self-employed or casual labourers. The Centre for Monitoring Indian Economy (CMIE) estimates Kerala's unemployment rate at a high of 23.5% for May 2021. The extent of wage loss is uncertain, though primary surveys indicate substantial wage reduction.

The pandemic and welfare

Social priorities for financial planning under such a crisis must appear straightforward. The Budget of the newly elected government of Kerala presented by Finance Minister K.N. Balagopal weighed the priorities right, keeping the pandemic in focus. The free vaccination policy, despite a drastic decline in public revenue by 18%, positions the Government as one that prioritises its people. Unemployment and employability find mention early in the Budget reiterating its inclinations. Setting aside ₹8,900 crore for an income transffor the poor and the vulnerable. Such an infusion will also stimulate the economy by boosting consumption demand.

High unemployment

Beyond the immediate crisis, Kerala is undergoing a transformation grappling with structural issues. For decades, the State has recorded one of the highest open unemployment rates in India - around 10%. Further, the labour force arguably suffers from the problem of 'employability', alluding to poor skills and incompetence.

With the youth bulge in Kerala's age structure, a large share of the population entered the labour force. This coincided with the structural transformation of the economy, i.e., the share of output shifting from agriculture to service.

However, this large rise in the labour force could not be absorbed in the emerging sectors that were less labour intensive causing structural unemployment. The economy now needed to grow at faster rates to absorb the new entrants. Concurrently, high reservation wages owing to international remittances, institutional wage setting and the State's welfare programmes implied that jobseekers sought jobs with decent wages as well. Low wage sectors are filled with inter-State miworkers, remaining unattractive to the locals. Open unemployment is thus a problem economic growth and

Knowledge economy

This Budget's focus on tackling unemployment is through the knowledge economy mission, initiated by the outgoing Government. With Kerala's reasonably high levels of an educated workforce, global exposure and its fragile ecosystem, a globally-linked knowledge-based economy has the potential for ecologically sustainable high economic growth. However, upon close reading, it seems that the mission addresses the wrong side of the problem. Instead of enhancing production in the knowledgebased economy, it envisages to increase the supply of skilled workers, through skilling programmes and matching demand and supply. The fundamental problem is not of labour market mismatch or supply of educated workforce, but that of poor labour demand.

The above view is often countered by the argument that poor labour demand is due to poor employability. Part of the knowledge economy frame is to improve 'employability' by improving skills and skill certification. Improved skills may enhance immediate employment chances But the notion—the 1990s driven by the services that skill is static and once acquired, the worker is employable is misplaced. Skill is dynamic, especially in the knowledge economy. The skill requirements are continuously being redefined. The knowledge economy is distinguished by its ability to innovate in short time spans.

As innovations take place, the skill requirements also evolve. For firms to remain competitive in the knowledge economy, they must recognise skill obsolescence and re-skill their workers. In fact, lifelong learning is a well-known feature of the knowledge economy. Under such circumstances, firms would want to reduce this complex phenomenon into a deficiency in workers, labelling it as poor 'employability' and arguing it as State failure in skilling. In fact, what labour market participants lack is the skill requirements that are ever changing in firms. Firms are best placed to know what skills are needed, and not the State. Firms are best placed to train the workers, not the State. Firms are the prime gainers in skill training, not the public. The Government could at best facilitate producers to undertake skill training. The innovative German programme on skilling can inform us.

State of traditional industries Meanwhile, industrial transformation has pushed many into frictional unemployment, due to their inability to move from one sector to another. Even while Kerala entered a high-growth trajectory in the traditional industries and agriculture sectors remained stagnant. These traditional agro-based industries are now competing in the global markets with not only competitor firms but even substitute products - for instance, coir with its plastic variant. Many such industries, such as cashew, are either moving out from Kerala or are being out competed in export markets. Having joined these sectors at an early age and worked throughout their lives, workers in these sectors are trapped in these 'sunset' industries, surviving on subsistence incomes and welfare support. With shrinking incomes and no alternative employment. these households are being driven to penury. The State must devise mechanisms to survive their lives with dignity.

Small and marginal farmers, and petty service providers suffer from poor incomes despite their efforts, a form of underemployment. Effective interventions can encourage collectivisation to overcome size-related diseconomies. New forms of collectives such as Kudumbasree and the new initiative of the Cooperative Initiative for Agriculture Infrastructure in Kerala (CAIK), are encouraging. Nevertheless, history must guide us to steer clear of the cooperative failures in the past, marred by poor incentive structures, rent seeking and political intervention.

Milkha Singh

The words of the legendary Milkha Singh, "God wanted me to play a part in bringing glory to India...", are touching. The photograph of the 'Flying Sikh' romping home to a gold in the 440-yard race in Cardiff, 1958 ('Sport' page, June 20) is reminiscent of Usain Bolt's finish for the gold in the 2008 Olympics. Given the huge chasm between the facilities available to the athletes of 1958 and now, Milkha Singh's feats evoke awe. The fact that the legend was a stickler for discipline and fitness is a good lesson to aspiring athletes in India. S. SANJEEVI RAO,

■ As a youngster, I had once watched Milkha Singh during his practice sessions at the Army regimental centre in Secunderabad; he was already a household name. My father was posted in the regiment and told me that the lean, wiry Sardar was none other than the great man himself. A detail that I will never ever forget is this.

Focus on COVID-19 estimated deaths

Mortality estimates, not officially reported deaths, have the potential to strengthen the pandemic response

CHANDRAKANT LAHARIYA

In India, even before the COVID-19 pandemic, around 85% of all deaths were registered and only one-fourth of the registered deaths were medically certified for the causes of death. There have been wide variations among States and within them, in rural and urban areas. Understanding the causes of death is essential for health sector planning and optimal allocation of health resources. In the absence of robust data on the causes of death, governments rely on estimates.

Reporting COVID-19 deaths

The World Health Organization has estimated that world over, COVID-19 deaths could be two-three times the officially reported numbers. Public health experts, disease modellers, and research institutes which specialise in morbidity and mortality data have estimated that COVID-19 deaths in India could be in the range of three to 14 times the officially reported number of deaths.

As per ground reports, there has been under-reporting of COVID-19 deaths during the second wave of infections in India. In April and May 2021, crematorium and burial grounds had long queues, dead bodies were floating in rivers, more cremations were being done following the COVID-19 protocols than the officially reported number of deaths, and everyone had a few people in their social circle who had succumbed to COVID-19. All of these have been captured in media reports from various settings, including major cities and a number of States. Each of these cities and States has reported excess deaths (comparing two similar periods in different years) that are twice to even 30-40 times higher than the officially reported COVID-19 numbers. Rural India is known to have a weak death registration system; however, there is corroborative evidence of excess deaths. At an existing death rate of seven per 1,000 people, an average village of 1,000 people should report around one death every two months. But most Indian villages have experienced deaths at a far higher rate in the two months of the second COVID-19 wave.

The Union and State governments have always been quick to deny estimates. Their core argument has been that COVID-19 deaths cannot be hidden. However, the biggest counter to this position has come from the reconciliation of COVID-19 deaths in Bihar and Maharashtra. Following reviews and audits, these States showed a nearly 75% increase in CO-VID-19 deaths over the officially reported deaths for the specified periods. The reconciliation from Bihar and Maharashtra was attributed to under-reporting in private hospitals, in home isolation, in transit to the hospitals/facilities and those who died with post-COVID-19 complications. In some of the districts, the revision resulted in the increase being twice or thrice the number of reported deaths. Therefore, it is logical to conclude that if and when other States initiate similar exercises, they are likely to report an upward shift in COVID-19 deaths.

In fact, the majority of the current analyses of excess deaths has come from urban settings and large municipal corporations, known for a relatively better functioning death registration system. The challenges in death reporting in rural areas are very different and far bigger. During the second wave, access to COVID-19 testing services and treatment facilities was limited in rural India. Pandemic-related restrictions, lack of transport and the health-seeking behaviour of citizens indicate that many people from the villages did not come in contact with the formal health system, which is concentrated in urban settings. Very few rural health facilities were providing services for COVID-19 care. Many people were admitted in the healthcare facilities without a RT-PCR test, and on the basis of clinical symptoms. As many ground reports have shown, deaths in these sub-groups did not make it to officially reported CO-

One of the core objectives of the pandemic response is to reduce mortality. Therefore, COVID-19 deaths are a good surrogate indicator of the health system's performance at the State and district levels. This is a more focused indicator of the response of the health system compared to process-oriented indicators such as daily tests conducted or dedicated COVID-19 beds added. If realistic estimates of COVID-19 deaths by city, rural settings, districts and States are known, a more targeted response could be mounted to the pandemic. The death estimates could be very useful to plan for the next wave of the pandemic (in the short term) and to strengthen the Indian health care system (in the long

Refining estimates

There are at least four approaches which can help us refine the estimates: death audits; excess death analysis; death surveys followed by verbal autopsies; and decadal Census, which is due in India.

First, every State should get death audits done to correctly classify all the deaths that occurred during the pandemic. The audits should focus on all the health facilities, in the public and private sector, as well as deaths in homes. The process of death audits needs to be institutionalised. The experiences of Bihar and Maharashtra show that this can be done quickly.

Second, the excess deaths in the pandemic period should be analysed more systematically. For urban settings and those States which have a relatively high death registration, such analysis can be done in a short period of time.

Third, rural areas and smaller towns require additional data collection. The death registers at the village level can be utilised and panchayats can provide this data in real-time, which can be collated by the administration. The sample registration system teams functioning under the Registrar General and Census Commissioner in India and the booth-level officers used in elections can be mobilised to collect additional information on deaths reported in April and May 2021. This can help the government in getting more realistic death estimates in the next few months. The Jharkhand government completed one such survey, focused exclusively on rural areas, which found 43% excess deaths than the comparable period before the pandemic. The State surveyed two-third of its population with the help of the existing workforce, in 10 days. Such surveys should be planned by all States, followed by verbal autopsy, to assign the causes of deaths.

Fourth, there is an urgent need to initiate the decadal Census in India. The U.S. and China conducted their census in 2020 during the pandemic. India should urgently plan for the Census, which would provide useful data for all sectors. Inter-censal growth will provide an important insight into the excess mortality.

The political leadership and health policymakers seem to be taking solace in the fact that India has not yet reported the highest number of COVID-19 deaths in the world. However, there is bigger merit in developing realistic COVID-19 death estimates, which could be more helpful in policy formulation, planning, resource allocation and health system strengthening. Therefore, the governments at all levels (Union, States and districts) should work to come up with the estimated number of CO-VID-19 deaths. That kind of granular data on deaths along with other health data will help India fight the pandemic and plan for the post-pandemic period more effectively.

FROM THE READERS' EDITOR

An invitation for a virtual conversation

The RE's Office will host a virtual Open House on July 17

A.S. PANNEERSELVAN

In 2012, when I was appointed the Readers' Editor (RE) of this newspaper, I came up with different working methodologies to fulfil the various strands of the mandate under the binding Terms of Reference. One of the tasks assigned to the RE was "to look for ways of improving the paper's work and performance, in the broadest sense, by collating and analysing readers' concerns, ideas, and suggestions and identifying possible new or alternative courses of action and ways to develop the paper for the benefit of its readers and the paper itself".

Reaching out to the newspaper

There are three conventional forums through which readers reach out to the newspaper: they write letters to the editor, letters to the RE, and express their opinion in the below-the-line comment section of the web edition of the newspaper. A careful analysis of these comments brought out a simple truth starkly: readers comment on specific news reports and not on the newspaper as a whole. A newspaper is a jigsaw puzzle, where each piece is tied to another in an organic manner. Editorial judgment is the suturing tool which brings these pieces together. The idea that a responsible newspaper is an interlocking public flows from this.

In 2013, we organised the first Open House for The Hindu's readers in Chennai. Even while inviting readers for this event, I made it clear that a newspaper is not a consumer product; it is a public institution, a common good, and a public sphere despite its private ownership. Over a period of time, I have argued that the legacy media, such as The Hindu, can retain the space for the classical four 'd's' of democracy - discussion, dissent, debate and, finally, informed decision. I have also written that digital platforms, despite all the possibilities they offer, often tend to become ideological silos, where common ground is elusive.

Based on this premise, I managed to host several Open House discussions across cities. These paved the way for a free and frank exchange of ideas between the editorial team, led by the Editor himself, and a vast cross-section of readers. These meetings brought together the various expectations that readers have of the the newspaper in different cities. It helped us realise that a onesize-fits-all approach is not only a bad policy for governance but also for a multi-edition newspaper. The last Open House was held on February 1, 2020, in Vijayawada. As I had mentioned in my column, 'The language of grief' (March 23, 2020), we had to call off the Open House that we had planned to celebrate 50 years of this newspaper in Bengaluru.

Virtual meetings

While the news cycle moved to being distinctly digital, with virtual meetings becoming the norm, I was still holding on to my belief that a physical meeting is more ideal for dialogue than the virtual space. I was desperately hoping that the pandemic would soon become endemic and we could meet each other for a hearty exchange of views and ideas. But I am not a Luddite to shun the possibilities afforded by science and technology. In fact, as early as in 2015, we hosted a virtual Open House to mark The Hindu's digital presence. Though we gained a lot from our distant interactions with our readers, it certainly lacked the compact of a physical

However, the severity of the pandemic has changed the dynamics of conversation. More people are now comfortable talking to each other virtually. The lockdown-imposed reality has forced us to reach out to each other in the cyberworld. And so, we have decided to host a virtual Open House on July 17, a

We solicit readers to write to us a brief note about themselves if they are interested in attending the virtual Open House. Though technology permits any number of participants, we would like to limit participation to 100 readers in order to have an effective conversation. Your personal note will help us invite people from different parts of India and ensure wider participation. We propose to have the session between 11:00 a.m. and 1:30

The objective of the Open House remains the same: to listen to readers closely to find out what they are interested in and to explain some salient features of the newspaper's working.

A matter of dress and discipline

When the police wear formal clothes and conduct themselves professionally, they command respect

M.P. NATHANAEL

The Director of the Central Bureau of Investigation, Subodh Kumar Jaiswal, recently directed all officials in the agency to dress in formal clothes while on duty. This means that all the male officers should wear collared shirts, formal trousers and shoes and all the women officers should wear sarees, suits, or formal shirts and trousers. Casuals are a strict no-no.

Until a few decades back, there was no need to issue such an order. Police officers are normally trained to maintain decorum in office. But over the years, there has been more indiscipline, which has led to this situation. The enforcement of discipline originates from the top. The head of the organisation may himself be observing a proper dress code. But enforcement of discipline needs to flow down the line to the last man. Such enforcement builds up a culture and an ethos within the organisation.

When I joined the Central Reserve Police Force for my basic training in Neemuch, most of my batchmates who wore printed shirts were asked to pack them and never to be seen in them again. Only plain, striped, or checked shirts were to be worn. The barber turned us into easily recognisable trainees by giving us crew cuts. All this instilled a sense of pride in us.

Image of the police

Decorum isn't about clothes alone. The Director General (DG) of Bihar Police, S.K. Singhal, issued instructions recently to all personnel to not use their mobile phones while on duty, except in exceptional cases, as it "affects the image of the police". A strict enforcement of this order will not only enhance the image of the police but will go a long way in improving the efficiency of the force. Alertness, the hallmark of efficiency in a police force, will produce the desired results. When the police are seen chatting on mobile phones while on duty, it tends to tarnish the image of the police. They are seen as being negligent and inefficient in the performance of their duties. The responsibility largely devolves on the junior officers to check their subordinates from using mobiles.

A few years ago, the then DG of Bihar Police issued orders that police personnel should not sport any religious symbols on their uniforms or body that would indicate their religious leanings. The order was issued because many were sporting a 'tilak' on their foreheads while in uniform. As per regulations, policemen are debarred from wearing any religious marks on their face or uniform. Only Sikh personnel are permitted to wear turbans and grow a beard and moustache. There can be no compromise in projecting the secular nature of the police forces of the country.

The Police Commissioner of Delhi, S.N. Shrivastava, recently raised objections to civil defence volunteers donning the khaki, an exclusive preserve of the police. A civil defence volunteer was recently arrested for posing as a sub-Inspector and prosecuting those who were violating COVID-19 lockdown restrictions. The matter is being taken up by the Ministry of Home Affairs.

When the police are smartly dressed and conduct themselves in a professional manner, they command the respect of the general public. Potbellied policemen project a bad image of the force. The Central Armed Police Forces rightly introduced the concept of an annual medical examination in the late nineties for all the personnel. This has not only kept them trim and fit but has also ensured that they are always in good health. Any medical deficiency can result in their losing promotions.

Once the pandemic ends, it is hoped that the health sector shows drastic improvement. It would be a step in the right direction if medical examinations are introduced in all government departments. If this is done, health issues can be detected in the initial stages and treated early.

The Central and State governments should issue orders as part of the conduct rules that all employees must be in formal wear when attending office. When private companies can enforce a dress code, there is no reason why government services shouldn't.

Mediation on Bangla Desh

The Prime Minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, said to-day [June 20] that "butchery in Bangla Desh" would have to stop first before India took part in any mediation efforts on the issue. She was answering questions on developments in Bangla Desh and the resultant problem of six million refugees on Indian soil at a 30-minute news conference here [Srinagar] at the conclusion of her visit to Kashmir valley. On recognition of Bangla Desh, the Prime Minister made it clear that the time for it "has not come yet." It was for the Government to decide what was good for the country, she added, and not what some people said or demanded. India, said Mrs. Gandhi, would continue to watch the situation as it developed in Bangla Desh. Just now it had no specific solution to the problem. She went on: "I only know that we are not going to allow them (refugees) to stay on here – neither shall we allow them to be butchered there." Asked what India planned to do if Pakistan failed to respond to Indian pleas, she replied: "We will see what the situation is" and went on to add in a lighter vein: "as I love the press, I do not think I shall tell them first.'

Tilak Swaraj Fund

The Tilak Swaraj Fund week commenced yesterday. Arrangements have been made in the city for bands of workers accompanied by volunteers to go in for house to house collections. The local Muslim Volunteer corps is a sprightly, well organised band of young men. Their services have been willingly placed at the disposal of the Tilak Swaraj Fund Committee. Other young men have also volunteered their services. There is no lack of enthusiasm in the city but the one great drawback is that the months of May and June are the time of vacation for the members of the legal profession, and for the student community who usually repair to their homes in the districts or go out in quest of rest and recreation. These months are also the principal part of the marriage season. With all these distracting conditions, which render the carrying out of the Bezwada programme not a little difficult for the people in this part of the country, it is earnestly hoped that they will rise to the ocassion. The collections reported from the districts are usually in driblets. They show that the movement has got a firm hold on the masses.

Excess deaths nearly 6 times official toll'

The graph shows the number of deaths registered by the Civil Registration System in Karnataka through the years

With officials of the Statistics Department remaining tight-lipped after oral gag orders from seniors, COVIDspecific death reporting from districts has become inaccessible in Karnataka. It also indicates a much higher toll than reported earlier. For example, last week, the official COVID-19 death toll in Mysuru, which was counted at 1,910, was reto 3,300 after reconciliation.

Officials admit that even the numbers available in the CRS data is only provisional as reporting of death has always been slow in rural areas. The pandemic has also resulted in inefficient data collection across 35,000 births and deaths registration centres in the State.

With Chief Minister B.S. Yediyurappa announcing ₹1 lakh to BPL families that have reported a COVID-19 death, the number of deaths officials said.

The Chief Minister has indicated that the State is estimated to spend between ₹250- ₹300 crore on the relief scheme which is expected to benefit between 25,000 and 30,000 families. Irrespective of the number of deaths, each such rishnan) not report death immediately. Delayed registration has been a norm," Mr Yediyurappa said recently. He pointed out that in 2019, of the total 5.08 lakh deaths reported, as many as 1.67 lakh deaths, including 1.01 lakh reported in rural areas, were delayed registration. While the figures are provisional, and officials are expecting reconciliation of numbers in the coming weeks or months, the Registration of Births and Deaths Act 1969 and the Karnataka Registration of Births and Death Rules 1970 (subsequently amended in 1999), mandate reporting deaths within 21 days.

Under various other provisions, however, deaths can be reported beyond 21 days. Even after a year, the death can be registered through an order of a First Class Judicial Magistrate.

Attempts to seek a response on the issue of excess deaths from Additional Chief Secretary Planning and Statistics Shalini Rajineesh failed.

Students flay CUCET for more varsities They say lakhs of them don't have resources to access online paid coaching classes at this stage

A group of students who have just completed Class 12 are objecting to the proposal to conduct a common entrance test for admission to all Central universities, including those such as Delhi University which have used only Class 12 board marks as the criterion so far. The students, who hail from different parts of the country, have written to the Education Ministry and the DU authorities, warning that such a move will favour rich students who have had access to coaching classes or are already preparing for standardised tests such as JEE or NEET.

The National Testing Agency is yet to take a final decision on the scope or the date for the Central Universities Common Entrance Test (CUCET) this year. The test's multiple choice question papers cover language, general awareness, mathematical aptitude and analytical skills, as well as domain knowledge in the candidate's chosen subjects.

"Delhi University aspirants were entirely focused towards Board exam preparation. Since an entrance exam will contain aptitude part, many will face problems dealing with it as it entirely varies from what one has learnt in 10+2," said one common letter sent by students to the DU Vice-Chancellor, noting that science students may not be prepared for the general knowledge section, while arts and commerce stream students may need time to prepare for the logical reasoning and quantitative ability sections.

"Also, the students who were already preparing for professional degree courses would find it easier as they were already preparing for such a test since grade 11," it said, noting that lakhs of students do not have the resources to suddenly access online paid coaching classes at this stage. The students also noted that students looking to change streams would find it hard to attempt the subject-specific papers.

Congress to celebrate 1971 war jubilee

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT NEW DELHI

The Congress is planning to organise district-level programmes to kick off the golden jubilee celebrations of the 1971 Liberation War of Bangladesh from mid-July, a source said on Sunday.

The party had planned grassroots level meets across 650 districts from May 1 to celebrate an occasion considered to be one of the finest moments of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. Politically, it is meant to be an effective counter to BJP's aggressive nationalism plank by reminding the new generation that Indira Gandhi was the person who managed to break up Pakistan.

However, the party's plan got derailed because of the spike in the number of CO-VID-19 case in the second

The source cited above said former Defence Minister A.K. Antony, who heads the Congress committee on organising golden jubilee celebrations of the 1971 War, has reviewed plans with the convener of the group, Captain Praveen Davar (retd), on restarting the programmes if the corona situation improves by mid-July.

Invitation cards with the iconic photo of the then Pakistani commander, Lieutenant General A.A.K. Niazi, signing the surrender document before India's Lt General Jagjit Singh Aurora and of Ms. Gandhi congratulating the chiefs of Indian armed forces including Sam Maneckshaw, have been sent out. Last December, Congress president Sonia Gandhi had set up a committee that included senior members like Punjab Chief Minister Amarinder Singh, former Lok Sabha Speaker Meira Kumar and former Maharashtra Chief Minister Prithviraj Chavan among others. Though Ms. Gandhi was invited by Bangladesh Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina to take part in the March 26 celebrations at Dhaka, she skipped it because of the pandemic.

It is under Kerala HC jurisdiction now PRESS TRUST OF INDIA The Lakshadweep administration, which has been fac-

These decisions included revising standard operating procedures for COVID-appropriate behaviour, introduction of the "goonda Act" and demolishing hutments of fishermen for widening of roads.

NGOs, zoo and Kamrup administration to work with temple for project

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

A major temple in Assam has signed a memorandum of understanding with two green NGOs, the Assam State Zoo-cum-Botanical Garden and the Kamrup district administration for the longterm conservation of the rare freshwater black softshell turtle or the Nilssonia nigricans.

A vision document 2030 was also launched after Turtle Survival Alliance India and Help Earth signed the pact involving the Hayagriva Madhava Temple Committee. The temple, revered by both Hindus and Buddhists, is at Hajo, about 30 km northwest of Guwahati.

Until sightings along the Brahmaputra's drainage in Assam, the black softshell turtle was thought to be "extinct in the wild" and confined only to ponds of temples in northeastern India and Bangladesh. The International Union for Conservation of Nature had in 2021 listed the turtle as "critically endangered". But it does not enjoy legal protection under the Indian Wildlife (Protection) Act of 1972, although it has traditionally been hunted for its meat and cartilage, traded in regional and international markets.

"Various temple ponds in Assam such as that of the Hayagriva Madhava Temple harbour various threatened species of turtles. Since the turtles are conserved in these ponds only based on religious grounds, many biological requirements for building a sustainable wild population have since long been overlooked," Arpita Dutta of Turtle Survival said.

"This multi-stakeholder association [conservation pact] aims to restock the wild with viable, self-suffisurvival and existence of the endangered freshwater turtles," she added. Kamrup Deputy Commissioner Kailash Kartik N. emphasised the mass awareness on the conservation issues of all species of turtles in the region while working on threats and opportunities to strengthen the black softshell turtle population in As-

The government is open to coming out with more measures to boost the economy, hit by the second COVID-19 wave, said Chief Economic Adviser (CEA) K.V. Subramanian.

But he said the demand for a fresh stimulus package had to be considered against the backdrop of the initiatives taken by Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman in her Budget for 2021-22. The CEA was responding to a suggestion by some industry bodies that the government needed to announce a ₹3 lakh crore stimulus package to boost the economy.

'Restore full statehood to J&K'

Congress demand comes ahead of PM's meeting with political leaders

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT NEW DELHI

The Congress on Sunday asked the Narendra Modi go vernment to restore statehood to Jammu and Kashmir (J&K) in the interest of democracy and upholding constitutional principles.

The demand comes days before the Prime Minister's proposed meeting with political leaders from J&K on June 24. The Prime Minister's Office is learnt to have invited 14 leaders, including four former Chief Ministers from J&K, to discuss the political situation. It will be the first meeting between Mr. Modi and leaders from the region after the Centre diluted in 2019 J&K's special sta-

"It is now for the Prime Minister and the BJP to decide whether to hold a meeting or to accept the demand of the Indian National Congress in the interest of the Constitution, democracy and the people to restore full statehood to the State of Jammu and Kashmir," party spokesperson Randeep Surjewala told mediapersons.

He did not say whether or not the party will participate in the June 24 meeting.

Previous resolution

He recalled that on August 6, 2019, a day after the Centre's decision on Article 370 and bifurcation of J&K, the Congress Working Committee (CWC) had adopted a resolution that clearly demanded the restoration of full statehood. "We believe that undoing it [statehood] is a direct attack on democracy and the constitutional principles." He said elections to the Assembly should be held so that people can elect their representatives instead of being ruled by Delhi.

While the political affairs committee of the PDP has authorised its chief, Mehbooba Mufti, to take a call, the People's Alliance for Gupkar Declaration (PAGD), an umbrella of mainstream parties in J&K, will meet on Tuesday to decide on the June 24 meeting.

Cong. questions 'silence' on Ayodhya deal

Party demands a probe into land purchase, alleges misuse of temple funds

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

The Congress on Sunday questioned Prime Minister Narendra Modi's silence over alleged corruption in the purchase of land in Ayodhya by the Ram Temple Trust and urged the Supreme Court to "fulfil" its duty of getting the matter probed under its supervision. Addressing a virtual press conference, Congress general secretary Randeep Surjewala alleged that a local BJP leader in Ayodhya, Deep Narayan, brought 890 square metres of land for ₹20 lakh in February and sold it to the temple Trust for ₹2.5 crore, making a profit of 1,250% in only 79 days.

For speedy construction He said the funds collected in the name of Lord Ram were being "looted" by BJP leaders in Ayodhya, and wondered why Mr. Modi has not spoken out or the top court hasn't taken note of it. The Congress, however, reiterated that it favoured the speedy construction of a Ram temple at Ayodhya to fulfil the aspirations of millions of devotees of Lord

Ram. "Lord Ram's temple is being constructed as per the orders of the Supreme Court. Is it not the responsibility of the Supreme Court and its judges and the Prime Minister who formed the Trust, to find out the truth and investigate this?" Mr. Surjewala told reporters when asked if the party would move the court.

Earlier, on June 14, the Congress had demanded a Supreme Court-monitored probe into a land "scam", alleging that a plot of land that was purchased for ₹2 crore the Trust within five minutes. The party had cited the land deed registered on March 18 this year.

Mr. Surjewala said, "President of Ram Mandir Construction Trust, Mahant Nritya Gopal Das, has publicly stated that he is not being consulted about the affairs of the Trust for last one year nor is any transparency being followed. Even Shankaracharya Swami Swaroopanand Saraswati has openly come out and spoken against irregularities in affairs of the Trust. Who is, then, accoun-

Punjab PCC chief flays move to give jobs to sons of MLAs

Govt. says their grandfathers were murdered by militants

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT NEW DELHI

Amid the ongoing turmoil in the Punjab Congress, Pradesh Congress Committee (PCC) chief Sunil Jakhar targeted the Amarinder Singh Cabinet's decision to give government jobs to the sons of two sitting Congress legislators, and demanded that the decision be scrapped.

Last Friday, the Punjab government decided to appoint Arjun Partap Bajwa and Bhisham Pandey, both sons of two Congress lawmakers, Fatehjang Singh Bajwa and Rakesh Pandey, as police inspector and naib tehsildar, respectively.

The rationale for the Cabinet decision was that their grandfathers had been murdered by militants.

"Chief Minister Captain Amarinder Singh Ji must reverse the ill-advised decision," Mr. Jakhar said in a statement that was released on Saturday, adding that charges of nepotism and political expediency would be levelled against the party. "The decision is also, in my view, against the ethos and culture of neutrality followed by Chief Minister Captain Amarinder Singh and the Congress party as a whole."

Mr. Jakhar, who is expected to be changed as part of a PCC revamp exercise, asserted that key decisions of the State Cabinet, such as implementing the pay commission recommendations, reg-

'Token of gratitude'

"No question of rescinding #PunjabCabinet decision on iobs for sons of 2 @INCPunjab MLAs. It is just a small token of gratitude & compensation for the sacrifices of their families. It's shameful that some people are giving political colour to this decision," the Punjab Chief Minister said on Twitter on Saturday.

Notwithstanding the official explanation, the decision regarding the two MLAs follows a political re-alignment between Capt. Singh and his former critics to take on Navjot Singh Sidhu, who is now leading the dissidence against the Chief

Mr. Fathehjang is the sitting MLA of Qadian constituency and the brother of former PCC chief and Rajya Sabha member, Partap Singh Bajwa. Once a bitter critic of the Chief Minister, Mr. Bajwa has now joined hands with Capt. Singh to take on Mr. Sidhu.

The Amarinder-Bajwa duo in Punjab has been formed to send a clear signal to the All India Congress Committee (AICC) that the high command cannot "force" any decision regarding the cricketer-turned-politician. The three-member AICC panel, set up to resolve Punjab factionalism, had recommended to "suitably accommodate" Mr. Sidhu. However, the high command has to now deal with the Amarinder-Bajwa duo before any compromise can be worked out.

On June 22, the Punjab CM is expected to meet the head of the three-member AICC panel and Leader of the Opposition in the Rajya Sabha, Mallikarjun Kharge, towards resolving the Puncouncil meeting. Thereafter, a mammoth rally will be held in Patna," said Mr. Paswan after the national executive committee meeting of his group at his residence in Delhi. Mr. Paswan's father, Ram Vilas Paswan, had represented Hajipur nine times in the Lok Sabha, and currently, his uncle Pashupati Kumar Paras is the LJP MP from there.

Mr. Paswan said Bihar Chief Minister Nitish Kumar was trying to engineer a split in the LJP, but "was not successful".

"The Bihar Chief Minister has been trying to generate a split among Dalit voters' unity for a long time. In this contest, first he made a division among Dalit and Mahadalit and the LJP had opposed this policy of Mr. Kumar and him in the last Assembly election. It was because of the LIP's opposition that the ID(U)'s seats were reduced to half in this election. And after this debacle, Mr. Kumar had decided to make a split in the LJP. It was under this plan that he tried to split our party by promising ministerial berth to a senior leader of the party. But his plan was not successful," said a release.

"The LJP has never compromised out of fear of struggle. If we were to comprowe would have accepted Nitish Kumar's offer of 15 seats in the last Assembly poll and our Ministers would have been there in the State," Mr. Paswan said.

While condemning "unconstitutional" the misconduct of expelled party leader Mr. Pashupati Kumar Paras to mislead people, the national executive committee passed five resolutions. The committee also urged the Prime Minister to confer Bharat Ratna on the late Ram Vilas Paswan and install his statue in Bihar in view of his 50 years of active politics and his contribution to nation-building.

The committee also opposed the use of LJP's symbol by Mr. Paras.

I was prepared for a long time in prison given the difficulties of getting bail under UAPA, says the student activist

SHINJINI GHOSH

Jawaharlal Nehru University student and Pinjra Tod activist Devangana Kalita, who was recently released on bail after being arrested for her alleged role in the Delhi riots and charged under the UAPA, speaks on freedom, life inside Tihar jail and other things. Edited excerpts:

It has been over a year since you were charged and in jail. How does it feel to finally be

■ It's definitely a relief to be free, not just for Natasha and me, but for all our friends and families who have been supporting us for the last one year ... It's still overwhelming to even look at a bustling street after a year of being locked in. There are many still inside, for crimes they do not even know or never committed, like our friend and jailmate Gulfisha incarcerated for over a year under the same charges as us. In their continued incarceration, our bail doesn't feel like

Between the Delhi High

Court granting you bail and your release, there was almost a 36-hour gap. What was going on in your mind at that time? Your comments on the delay?

■ Those 36 hours were stressful but we had anticipated that if we got bail, securing release would not be easy. We were glad to learn that the High Court had granted us bail, considering what the UAPA covers cannot be arbitrary and vague...

The next day we had heard that the verification had not been completed and that the police had filed an application in the Supreme Court challenging the order ... Knowing how difficult it is to get bail for a UAPA undertrial, we were prepared for a long time in prison. The suddenness of the release also did not allow us the chance to say goodbye to our fellow inmates properly...

UAPA charges were slapped against you and the others.

In the past year, were there moments of uncertainty and helplessness? ■ Historically, one has seen how laws like the UAPA have been used to keep dissenting voices and people from marginalised communities inside for prolonged periods without bail. The process itself becomes a punishment, even before a trial takes There were many moments of uncertainty and helplessness, especially given the general anxiety and insecurity caused by the pandemic, fearing for the health of our loved ones who we could barely access and could not care for inside and outside prison. Yet, we were also always hopeful that society as a whole

What was your experience like inside Tihar and how has it impacted you?

■ Jail is systematically made into a dehumanising experience. Authorities have absolute power over life and movement and use that pow-basic freedoms. This over and above the lack of infrastructure inside. It's maybe too soon to say exactly how it has impacted me personally, but there are so many things that I saw that I will never be able to forget.

We witnessed first-hand how our jails are filled with the most vulnerable people in our society, mostly working-class, Dalit and Muslim communities. It was also deeply impressed on us how jail is but a microcosm of the power dynamics that operate in society as a whole, with people's vulnerabilities outside only getting intensified inside.

Often, lack of support on the outside and the challenges of navigating an opaque legal aid system with very scant resources extend and intensify the punishment meted out by the legal sys-

There are several scholars and activists who are still behind bars with similar charges. Your comments on it and how do you perceive the government's action?

■ It is a terrible reality that today people who are, in fact, speaking up and working to make our country and society more just, equal and free of oppression are being incarcerated and labelled as anti-national, especially those from marginalised communities or in solidarity.

At the same time, the repression of activists and scholars are just the tip of a massive iceberg, where wrongful incarcerations and long jail terms for undertrials have become a rule rather than an exception.

What next for Devangana Kalita?

■ It's probably too early to say but we hope to carry on the struggle to build an equal, just and free society ... I also look forward to spending some time with my friends and family...and finishing my M.Phil.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

The Patna High Court has pulled up the Bihar government again for not maintaining its records of births and deaths during the COVID-19 pandemic, adding that the State's reluctance to publish the number of deaths was "uncalled for" and was "not protected by any law".

A Division Bench comprising Chief Justice Sanjay Karol and Justice Sanjay Kumar said, "To cover with a veil of secrecy the common routine business is not in the interest of the public. Such secrecy can seldom be legitimately desired."

"In our considered view, the resistance [to publish records of deaths and births] is uncalled for, as such action is neither protected by any law nor in consonance with settled principles of good governance. The government, while correcting its myopic approach, only needs a reminder that to cover with a veil of secrecy the common routine business is not in the interest of the public," the court said on Friday while hearing a suo motu public interest litigation (PIL) petition on COVID-19 management.

death certificates of persons who die from COVID-19 in hospitals show the reason as lung or heart problem or something else," Justice M.R. Shah had told Solicitor-General Tushar Mehta, for the Centre, recently.

"All deaths with a diagnosis of COVID-19, irrespective of co-morbidities, are to be classified as deaths due to COVID-19," the Centre clarified.

It said "death certification" was required for recording deaths in accordance with the regulations prescribed by the Registrar-General of India. "The primary goal of certification of cause of death [death certificate] is to identify and correctly classify all deaths due to a medical condition [eg. COVID-19] and to eliminate any discrepancy in coding so as to obtain true estimates of burden of COVID-19 deaths," the Centre explained.

"Any breach of the guidelines for recording COVID-19 deaths would be a criminal offence as stipulated under Section 188 of the Indian Penal Code," it added. This provision punishes disobedience to an order duly promulgated by a public Health infrastructure has increased 45-fold: Centre

'Total vaccine coverage 27.23 cr. doses'

LEGAL CORRESPONDENT NEW DELHI

The Centre told the Supreme Court that the nation's health infrastructure has increased up to 45-fold to brace successive waves of the COVID-19 pandemic.

The Centre also told the court that the total cumulative vaccine coverage was 27.23 crore doses as on June 19. The total cost, including payment, advance and operational cost, had been ₹9,504.315 crore. Centre shared the information with the court even as apprehensions have been raised about a third wave hitting the country soon.

A detailed affidavit filed by the Centre, represented by Solicitor-General Tushar Menta and Additional Solicitor-General Aishwarya Bhati, in the Supreme Court showed that the total intensive care unit (ICU) beds had increased by 45-fold, from a baseline 2,500 to 1,13,035.

The total isolation beds (excluding ICU beds) had climbed 42-fold, from 41,000 to 17.17 lakh. The number of category one CO-VID-19 dedicated hospitals had increased 25-fold from 163 to 4,096, while the number of category two dedicated COVID-19 health centres and category three dedicated COVID-19 care centres were 7,929 and 9,954 res-

The government said over 1.5 lakh health personnel had been engaged - 7,024 medical officers, 3,680 spe cialists, 35,996 staff nurses, 18,649 MHWs, 1,01,155 community volunteers, Accredited Social Health Activists (ASHA) and ASHA facilitators, and 48,453 other support staffs.

The affidavit said insurance coverage was given to 22.12 lakhs heath workers, including ASHAs fighting COVID-19. Testing capacity had been increased with 2,621 labs. The government called its increase in testing capacity "phenomenal", from 30,000 tests a day in April 2020 to a high of 22 lakh tests daily.

Scale up public health, social measures: WHO

'Accelerate vaccination for COVID-19'

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

The World Health Organization (WHO) has advised countries in the South-East Asia region to scale up and rigorously implement public health and social measures, along with efforts to accelerate vaccination for COVID-19, to prevent another surge, as more countries confirmed prevalence of highly transmissible variants of concern. "We need to continuously strengthen our efforts to test, trace and isolate. Societal interventions such as physical distancing, hand hygiene and proper wearing of masks need to be stringently implemented. These measures should be in full force and for longer periods in areas reporting more transmissible Variants of Concerns," said Poonam Khetrapal Singh, Regional Director, WHO South-East Asia. The release added that the public health and social measures were part of a wide range of non-pharmaceutical interventions, both individual and societal, and were cost-effective measures to reduce the spread of SARS-CoV-2.

In addition to personal protective measures, cleaning, disinfection, ventilation, surveillance, contact tracing, isolation and quarantine are recommended.

Even as countries scale up vaccination against CO-VID-19, they need to implement public health and social measures in a tailored and agile way, Dr. Singh said. A risk-based approach is needed for public health and social measures. These measures should be implemented by the lowest administrative level and continuously adjusted to the intensity of transmission and the capacity of health systems. The capacity of health systems includes both clinical care for CO-VID-19 and non-COVID-19, and public health services such as case detection, diagnostic testing and contact tracing.

"Where more transmissible Variants of Concern are spreading, these measures need to be applied more stringently," she added.

Andal's sister-in-law

Vasudeva takes Krishna to Gokula while everyone is asleep. He picks up the girl born to Yasoda, leaves Krishna beside Yasoda, and departs for Mathura. When Vasudeva had to take Krishna to Gokula, the chains binding him had fallen off. When he returned to the prison, the chains automatically bound him again. There is a symbolic message here, said V.S. Karunakarachariar in a discourse. When the Lord is with us, the bonds of samsara can be broken easily. When He is not with us, we remain bound by worldly ties. As soon as Vasudeva gets back, the sleeping guards wake up; the baby cries, and Kamsa is informed about the birth of the child. Devaki begs Kamsa not to harm the child, for it is not a male child as had been predicted. But Kamsa picks up the child by its legs, ready to smash its head. The child escapes from his hands, goes up, and says, "I can kill you easily, but I never kill anyone who has held my feet. So I am sparing your life. The One who will kill you is safe. Stop torturing gentle people like Vasudeva and Devaki." The child up in the sky transforms into eight-armed Durga, seated on a lion. Because Durga, who is the Lord's Yoga maya, protected Him when He took the Krishna avatara, there is a separate shrine for Her in the Thirukkovilur temple. Thirumangai Azhvar, while singing of this temple, praises this Durga too. Because Durga was born to Yasoda, Krishna's foster mother, she was Krishna's sister. Andal speaks of her as her sister-in-law! Because Yoga Maya went up to the sky (antariksha), Andal refers to her as antari. It is the tradition for the groom's sister to help the bride drape the wedding saree. Andal dreams of her marriage to Krishna, and she says that in that dream, she saw antari (Durga) help her wear the wedding saree!

The Taliban said on Sunday they were committed to peace talks, adding they wanted a "genuine Islamic system" in Afghanistan that would make provisions for women's rights in line with cultural traditions and religious rules.

The statement came amid slow progress in the talks between the Islamic group and Afghan government representatives in Qatar and as violence rises dramatically around the country ahead of the withdrawal of foreign forces by September 11.

Officials have said the Taliban has not yet submitted a written peace proposal that could be used as a starting point for substantive talks.

More than 500 million doses administered in less than a month: NHC's figures

ANANTH KRISHNAN

China has now administered more than one billion doses of COVID-19 vaccines, its National Health Commission (NHC) said on Sunday, with the vaccination campaign stepped up in recent weeks amid a small cluster of cases reported in southern China.

The renewed vaccination push saw 500 million doses administered in the past 28 days - more than 17 million doses across the country every day - according to the NHC's figures. It took more than three months for China to administer its first 100 million doses with its vaccination campaign beginning in December. It took 25 days to reach 200 million, a landmark reached on April 21, and 17 days to then reach the 300 million mark.

The initial slow speed was attributed to a combination of vaccine hesitancy and the widespread perception that vaccinations were not needed as COVID-19 had been broadly under control in China since last summer.

China has avoided a second wave with continuing tight curbs on international travel that have remained in place since last year, among few countries to keep in place stringent measures that severely limit the number of international arrivals, all of whom also have to undergo mandatory 21 days centralised

Stringent lockdowns and mass testing and tracing been deployed to quickly squash subsequent local outbreaks that have been linked to overseas arrivals or port cities, as has happened in recent weeks in southern Guangdong province which reported cases of the Delta variant. The Guangdong cases, coupled with cases also reported in the northeast, have pushed many to get vaccinated, with State media showing long queues of residents lining up, some waiting overnight in Guangdong to receive their shots.

Around 40% of the population will be fully vaccinated by the end of June, with 70% expected to be fully covered by the end of the year, authorities have said.

China's Sinopharm and Sinovac vaccines have been approved by the World Health Organisation for emergency use. While there have been questions about the efficacy of the vaccines, a May 26 study based on phase 3 trials of two of Sinopharm's vaccines conducted in the UAE and Bahrain placed their efficacy at 72.8% and 78.1%, respectively, in preventing all infections, lower than mRNA vaccines but similar to the Oxford/AstraZeneca vaccine's reported efficacy. Most significantly, the trial found the vaccines to be fully effective in preventing severe infections with the trial reporting zero severe cases among the vaccinated group.

A Beijing-based immunologist told the Communist Party-run Global Times on Sunday the next step, after vaccinating most of the population, would be "to improve the vaccines so that they can handle virus mutations as well as make them safe for the elderly."

Sri Lanka to probe 'Army attack and humiliation' of Muslims

Investigation ordered after image of people forced to kneel goes viral

MEERA SRINIVASAN

A widely-shared image on social media, showing a row of men kneeling in front of soldiers for reportedly violating the Sri Lanka's current lockdown, has prompted the army to probe the incident.

Issuing a media statement on Sunday, the Army said "it immediately removed" the personnel from their duties, "after an alleged improper conduct of a few army personnel" in Eravur, a Muslimmajority town in Batticaloa district. Initial investigation has begun, the Army said, pledging "strictest action".

The Sri Lankan Army, along with health professionals, helms the country's pandemic response, although government critics have slammed military involvement in addressing a public health crisis. Army Commander General Shavendra Silva heads the 'National Operation Centre for Prevention of COVID-19 Outbreak'.

The incident on Saturday which came to light after the photograph of kneeling men went viral online – has heightened fears in Eravur, locals said. It also comes at a time when there is growing

Responding to the Army's statement that they would probe the incident, the legislator told The Hindu that the Army was "forced to acknowledge" the incident and investigate it, since the image had gone viral on social media. "If they can investigate this matter now, why can't they do the same in regard to the Tamils' long-pending concerns about alleged crimes against humanity by the army at the end of the war? Do they mean to say not even one army member could have committed any wrong?" he asked.

Iran, world powers adjourn nuclear talks

Don't negotiate with Tehran: Israel PM

REUTERS

Iran and six world powers have adjourned nuclear talks for consultations in their capitals, the European Union's envoy to the negotiations said on Sunday.

Speaking to reporters, Enrique Mora gave no indication when the talks would resume, but said progress had been made and that the participants would have a clearer idea of how to close a deal when they return.

He added that he expected the international nuclear watchdog and Tehran to reach an agreement on extending a monitoring deal of Iran's nuclear activities that ends on June 24.

U.S. National Security Adviser Jake Sullivan said there are still disagreements between Iran and the world powers on key issues, including on sanctions and on the nuclear commitments that Iran has to make.'

Earlier, Israel PM Naftali Bennett condemned the victory of hardline judge Ebrahim Raisi as Iranian President, saying his would be a "regime of brutal hangmen" with which world powers should not negotiate a new nuclear deal.

Saudi Arabia seeks religious reset as clerical power wanes

Kingdom had ordered restrictions on mosque loudspeakers

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE

Muezzins issuing high-decibel calls to prayer have long been part of Saudi identity, but a crackdown on mosque loudspeakers is among contentious reforms seeking to shake off the Muslim kingdom's austere image.

Saudi Arabia, home to the holiest Muslim sites, has long been associated with a rigid strain of Islam known as Wahhabism that inspired generations of global extremists and left the oil-rich kingdom steeped conservatism.

But the role of religion faces the biggest reset in modern times as Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman, spurred by the need to diversify the oil-reliant economy, pursues a liberalisation drive in parallel with a vigorous crackdown on dissent.

K. NITYA KALYANI

O. Please tell me about the best health insurance policy for a family of 4 with a monthly income of ₹35,000?

A. You haven't said how old your family members are, so let us go by the assumption of a couple in the late 30s and two children in the 10 to 12 years' range. A basic hospitalisation policy with a family floater sum insured of at least ₹5 lakh would be good to begin with. This would cost between ₹10,000 and ₹12,000 a year.

The premium amount could make one hesitate, but a floater sum insured is cost-effective and the coverage is value-for-money as you are protected against harsh hospital expenses

Having said that, if you have the option of an employer medical insurance scheme that should be your first option. You can cover your spouse and children and, depending on the scheme, your parents as well.

As to what cover to choose, check a policy called Arogya Sanjeevani. It is a standardised policy that each general insurance company or health insurance company ought to offer. Every insurer's Arogya Sanjeevani policy will have the exact same policy benefits but with different premium rates. You can do an Internet search and see what this policy premium works out to for your family and choose the best option.

Q. I have been married for three years. My wife is pursuing her Ph.D. and doesn't have any regular income. I am looking for a life insurance plan for her as I already have a term policy in my name. No insurer would provide any term plan as she did not have regular income. Please advise.

A. Life insurance is an income protection for the dependents of the life assured. From that point of view, insurance companies base the amount of insurance they will offer on the earning capacity of the prospective life assured. An income is also the basis of verifying whether the prospect can afford regular premium payment to keep the policy alive. These would be the reasons why you have found it difficult to get your wife a term insurance policy.

This is not to say that it is not possible for her to buy life insurance. Please talk more in detail with the company that gave you your term insurance policy and set out the details of your family finances and future career prospects after she finishes her doctoral studies. Past employment history, if any, would also help establish her prospects in the employment market. Investments, earnings from investment and property belonging to your wife will give them comfort on premium paying capacity.

One way to make a breakthrough may be to try to buy a small policy. You can always add further sum assured by way of additional policies later.

Q. I had taken an annuity policy with a premium-paying period of 10 years. I scontinued premium payment in ear 2020, having paid ₹10 lakh in two years. As per the policy terms and conditions the policyholder may surrender his policy after a period of five years from the commencement of the policy and the fund value under the base policy (including top-ups) less applicable discontinuance charges, if any, will be paid to the policyholder according to the following options:

1. To commute to the extent allowed under Income Tax Act (0 to 33.33%) and the balance must be applied to purchase immediate annuity from the same insurer which shall be guaranteed for life, at the prevailing annuity rate or 2. To utilise the surrender value either to purchase a single premium deferred pension product of the same type from the company, if any. I request you to explain how to assess these options are worked out.

C. SATISH A. Any annuity plan requires you to use the bulk of the fund value/ maturity value on the vesting date or on surrender to buy an annuity policy from the same life insurance company. You have the option of taking up to 33.33% of the fund value as a commutation and this will be tax-free. The remainder of the fund value has to be used to buy an

Here, you have two options. An immediate annuity, which means your pension amount from this policy will start immediately and be paid at the frequency you opt for through the rest of your life. You may have a few options to consider on that such as return of purchase price and so on.

The other is a deferred annuity, which means you make the purchase now and opt for an annuity to start on a date of your choosing, a.k.a. the vesting date. They would have options on how late that vesting date can be depending on your age.

Deferred annuity would give you a better annuity amount than an immediate annuity simply due to the future value of present

As for information from the company, please ask them in writing for clarifications and they are bound to give you the information you require. You can also read your policy bond and read up information about this specific policy on the company's website. Since your policy can be surrendered by 2023, you have time to do the research.

Building the right emergency fund

AARATI KRISHNAN

One of the first pieces of financial advice given to young folks starting their career is that they should build an emergency fund. That's good advice, given that emergencies can deliver big setbacks to one's finances, if one is forced to turn to credit card debt or personal loans.

But how large should that emergency fund be and where should it be invested? Recent experience of real-life emergencies suggests that this is where generic advice tends to

Needed, a buffer

It is common practice to link the size of one's emergency fund to one's living expenses. So, if your family's expenses on basics such as house rent, loan EMIs, groceries, food, health, school fees and so on work out to say, ₹40,000 a month, you are advised to hold an emergency fund equal to say, 6 to 9 month's equivalent (₹2.4 lakh to ₹3.6 lakh).

The reasoning behind pegging the size of your emergency fund to monthly living expenses is that it should help your family tide over periods of income loss. If there's a temporary interruption in your earning capacity due to quitting a job, getting fired or suffering an illness or accident, the emergency fund should take over during this period.

While this is logical, job losses or accidents are not the only events that can require large out-of-pocket spending and force you into debt. In recent times, families where multiple members were affected by CO-VID-19 incurred medical expenses running into lakhs of rupees that either completely eroded savings or led to high debt. During the Kerala and

While one is advised to hold an emergency fund equal to say, 6 to 9 months' equivalent of expenses, a buffer of ₹1-₹2 lakh is also required to meet insurance exclusions

Chennai floods, folks had to vacate their homes at short notice and were forced to replace most or all of their household appliances damaged by floods, at one go. Emergency funds amounting to 6 or 9 months' living expenses are clearly not built to handle such exigencies.

This is where insurance comes in, fetching you relatively high cover against a modest premium payment. While most young folks know that adequate health insurance covering dependents is essential, fewer know about household insurance and personal accident covers, both of which come at nominal premiums.

Insurance isn't enough

Health and property insurance are essential components of preparing for emergencies. However, they do not do away with the need for an emergency fund. In natural calamities, accidents or medical emergencies, you need to prepare for the possibility that the event that put you through the wringer may be excluded from your insurance plan.

Most insurance contracts come with truckloads of fine print that include some kinds of emergencies, and leave out others. During COVID-19, many folks filing cashless hospital claims have found to their chagrin that they had to fork out large out-of-pocket expenses, because 40-50% of their hospital bills were disallowed by their insurer. Quite a few hospitals demanded upfront cash deposits to allot beds, overcharged on consumables such as PPE kits or billed more than governmentapproved rates for treatment that led to such partial reimbursement. To guard against such exclusions, it would be best to build a buffer of say ₹1-2 lakh into emergency fund, over and above your 6-9 months' living expenses.

Cash component

Thanks to the rise of net banking and digital wallets, most of us can get by with very little hard cash in normal times. But in extraordinary times, currency often turns out to be the king. During the Chennai floods, most ATMs could not be operated as the machines simply didn't receive cash refills. During COVID-19 times, we hear of hospitals demanding cash advances for quick admission and off-the-book purhard-to-get chases medication.

An emergency fund lying in a bank FD or mutual fund may not meet all your needs in such cases. Though it is a sub-optimal choice from the point of view of safety and returns, it may best for you to hold some hard currency at home to tide over such situations. About a month's living expenses should suffice.

Safety, not returns Savings accounts, bank fixed deposits and liquid debt funds are the usual avenues that advisers recommend for investing your emergency money. But when making these selections, avoid the temptation to shoot for high returns.

Liquidity and easy access at all times must be the watchwords

while saving money to meet a difficult situation

Co-operative banks, small finance banks, new banks or banks with slightly shaky financials may offer higher interest rates on savings accounts and FDs to woo depositors. But, should they land in trouble, RBI can impose sudden moratoriums on withdrawals when you urgently need the money. The recent cases of PMC Bank and Yes Bank which saw withdrawals capped by RBI morato-riums are examples. For your emergency money, it is best to stick temically important banks despite uninspiring rates.

With liquid or debt funds, there's even more reason not to be lured by returns. The crisis that the Franklin Templeton funds have run into, tell us that debt mutual funds with higher yields than peers are likely to be taking on both credit and liquidity risks. It is also best to go with conservative liquid funds that invest mainly in government paper.

Prioritise liquidity

The primary purpose of having an emergency fund is to be able to access the money at very short notice.

Take the case of liquid funds, a popular vehicle. The instant withdrawal facility on such funds is limited to ₹50,000. When you redeem higher sums, the official processing time is one or two business days. But the word 'business' is the operative word here. Should non-business days intervene, you may need to endure a 3- or even 4-day wait to get your hands on the money.

To avoid such delays, it may be best to divide up your emergency fund, to park some portion (say a third of it) in bank deposits with an instant online liquidation feature and a portion in liquid funds, while also holding hard currency that you can immediately access.

THINK INVESTOR: QUEST FOR REAL RETURNS

When inflation threatens your finances

Commodity or financial services stocks, and realty may offer better returns

VENKATESH BANGARUSWAMY

be a cause for concern, many tear a rise in inflation because of supply-side constraints owing to lockdowns in various parts of the country. In this article, we discuss whether you can moderate the effects of inflation on your personal finance.

Inflation risk

Inflation has a direct impact on your living expenses because you have to spend more to maintain your current standard of living. It is moot if your income would increase given the current state of the economy. Even if your income does increase, it is unlikely to keep pace with inflation. Now, increased spending without corresponding increase in income would mean lower savings to meet life goals.

Then, there is the secondary effect on your life goals. You Even as COVID-19 continues to may be investing to accumulate money to buy a house, fund your child's college education or save for your retirement. All these goals are exposed to inflation risk. The house you want to buy may be worth ₹2 crore today. Assuming a housing inflation of 10% per annum over the next five years, the house, five years hence, would cost ₹3.22 crore. Let us suppose you plan to save ₹64 lakh (20% of ₹3.22 crore) over the next five years for down payment and intend to borrow the rest from the bank.

In addition to the possibility that your investment may not earn the required return, your risk is that actual housing inflation could be greater than 10%. So, even if you accumulate ₹64 lakh in five years, you may fall short of offering the 20% down payment as housing would now be costlier. Inflation risk affects everyone whether you are a working executive or a retiree.

Inflation-based products

The best way to moderate inflation risk is to invest in inflationbased products.

Some products provide returns to protect your purchasing power.

For instance, in U.S., there are Treasury Inflation Protection Securities (TIPS). Similar retail products are yet to be available in India. Other inflation-based products generate positive returns when inflation rises. Managed futures in the U.S., for instance. In the absence of such products in India, you have to directly trade in commodity futures such as crude, copper and zinc, which many already do. What if you are uncomfortable with trading in commodity derivatives?

Riding the trough: The best way to moderate inflation risk is to invest in inflation-based products. • GETTY IMAGES/ISTOCK

A less-preferred alternative is to trade in momentum stocks. Momentum stocks are those that have been rising for a while and are expected to continue their uptrend. Such stocks produce positive returns but have the tendency to decline sharply when the market

The argument is that you can capture handsome returns on these stocks in quick time. The additional cash flows from such investments can moderate the stress you could face because of rising inflation, but the associated investment risks are high.

Alternatively, you should consider buying shares of commodity-based producers and financial services companies. Commodity producers ought to do well when the commodity prices increase (which increases inflation).

Likewise, rising inflation could push interest rates, making the financial sector appear attractive. The caveat is that better earnings prospects for companies may not necessarily translate into higher stock prices.

Conclusion

Rising inflation (inflation risk) is an issue for working executives. Fortunately, retirees and those approaching retirement can moderate inflation risk by investing in income-generating real estate.

This is because rental income can keep pace with rising inflation. New properties fetch market rentals and, therefore, move more closely with inflation than older properties. Real estate is sub-optimal for working executives as such investments are lumpy and illiquid.

Inflation's saving grace? The value of your existing borrowings will fall as money will be worth less than when you borrowed. Hardly comforting when living expenses are increasing, you might say.

Jamieson show puts New Zealand on top

Kiwi quick's five-for restricts India to 217; Williamson's men 101 for two in reply after openers shine

WTC FINAL

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE SOUTHAMPTON

New Zealand's Kyle Jamieson completed an impressive five-wicket haul before India's bowlers starred on the third day of the inaugural World Test Championship final at Southampton on Sunday.

An absorbing day of highquality cricket, cut short by bad light despite the floodlights being on full beam, ended with New Zealand 101/2 in reply to India's first innings 217, a deficit of 116

New Zealand opener Devon Conway fell for 54 shortly before stumps - his third score of over fifty in just five Test innings following the 29vear-old left-hander's stunning 200 on debut against England at Lord's this Jamieson is also in the early stages of his Test career yet the towering paceman still had a miserly return of 5/ 31 in 22 overs, including 12 maidens.

The 26-year-old's fifth fivewicket haul in just eight Tests included the prize scalps of India captain Virat Kohli and Rishabh Pant.

But Kohli failed to add his score when Jamieson got a full-length delivery to nip back and strike the star batsman on the front pad.

Gough's lbw decision but the English umpire's 'out' verdict was upheld to end a stand of 61.

The usually free-scoring Pant needed 20 balls to get off nought, with a four midwicket off through Jamieson.

Two balls later, however, Jamieson dismissed the wicketkeeper when Pant, drove loosely outside off stump and was well caught at second slip by Tom Latham. Rahane had batted in composed fashion.

But, one run shy of a fifty, vice-captain cramped trying to pull a Wagner short ball and lobbed a simple catch to Latham, now at midwicket. India's 211/7 at lunch became 213/9 soon afterwards when Jamieson dismissed Ishant Sharma and Jasprit Bumrah with successive deliveries.

Kohli's journey to world-beater

10 years since his Test debut, the India skipper has overcome a tentative start to become a giant of the game

S. DINAKAR CHENNAI

When Virat Kohli walked into the ground in Southampton on Sunday, it marked, to this day, exactly 10 years for him in Test cricket. And the transformation in him since his Test debut has been remarkable

In fact, this writer was at the press box in Sabina Park, Kingston, Jamaica, 2011, when a young Kohli played his maiden Test.

And, soon after he began his first Test knock, Kohli became an object of mirth with the West Indian scribes.

Fidel Edwards, deceptively quick with a nasty short ball, got Kohli to hop around with a short leg in place.

Uncomfortable

And Kohli was clearly uncomfortable, often jumping awkwardly to keep these deliveries down instead of going for the hook or the pull or swaying away, or ducking. And we heard voices. "He cannot play the short ball, maan," said one of the local scribes.

Edwards fired out Kohli early in both the innings; in the second he fell to a delivery aimed at his ribs.

During the practice sessions on the tour, Kohli would have tennis balls bounced at him. He had to keep his feet on the ground, watch the ball.

And when India toured Australia in 2011-12, the fiercely determined Kohli turned things around.

At the lively Perth pitch, he hooked and pulled, coming up with scores of 44 and 75. Then he conjured a magnificent 116 in the Adelaide Test. Kohli had arrived on the big stage. Now he is a giant in the game with 70 international hundreds, 27 of them in Tests.

From a tentative start to a world-beater, it has been a spirit-lifting journey by Kohli with a perfect 10 for dedica-

BCCI lends support to India's Olympic campaign

Commits to a ₹10 crore assistance

AMOL KARHADKAR

The Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) on Sunday approved upto ₹10 crore as support for India's Olympic campaign.

The BCCI apex council approved the proposal in an emergent meeting after it received a request from the Ministry of Youth Affairs and

The Hindu understands that, in line with the BCCI rulebook, the council has decided to release ₹2.5 crore as liquid funds and a maximum of ₹7.5 crore for running a promotional campaign in the lead-up to the Games,

"The BCCI has always been supportive of India's sporting movement. We are happy to help the national sports fraternity," an apex council member told The Hindu. "The liquid component will be utilised for logistical requirements of the contingent whereas the remaining funds will be used to create a buzz for the Olympic campaign.'

"Since the BCCI constitution doesn't allow more than ₹2.5 crore to be released as cash for such a cause, the remaining amount will be directed towards the agencies that will run the marketing campaign.'

Earlier on Sunday, the BCCI office-bearers briefed select State associations about supporting the Olympic contingent.

Compensation package

Meanwhile, the apex council also formed an 11-member working group to decide on the compensation package tor scores of domestic cricketers and officials who are waiting to be compensated for the loss of matches due to the pandemic. The group includes officebearers and a representative from each of the BCCI zones. In December last year, the BCCI AGM had decided to form a group to work on the compensation package.

India women present a strong case for more Tests

Debutants Shafali, Sneh, Deepti and Taniya prove they are up for the challenge in the longest format

INDIA IN ENG

P.K. AJITH KUMAR

The great escape to draw f I on Saturday at Bristol is the latest chapter in the fascinating, and increasingly popular, story of Indian women's cricket.

Here was a team, with five debutants, playing its first Test in seven years against a far more experienced host. Here was a team staring at defeat, following on and just 75 runs ahead. There were only two wickets in hand and plenty of overs to bat with two debutants at the crease.

Between them, Sneh Rana and Taniya Bhatia had lasted 22 balls in the first innings. So England must nave been hoping to get the last two Indian wickets quickly.

In no mood to oblige

Sneh and Taniya, however, were in no mood to oblige. They blunted, tormented and attacked the formidable England line-up, as they stayed firm for more than 30 overs. Their unbroken 104-run stand for the ninth wicket gave India a draw that captured the imagination of cricket lovers.

So much so, Sneh was trending on Twitter. The unbeaten 80 wasn't her only contribution; she had taken four wickets with her off-spin in the England innings. She was making a comeback to international cricket after five years, and two months after losing her father.

Sneh, though, is only one of the success stories for India from Bristol. There is Shafali Verma, the 17-yearold who scored 96 and 63.

She had been thought of that she wasn't even given an ODI cap.

It was remarkable how the likes of Shafali and Taniya – the 23-year-old wicketkeeper known for her smart stumpings - adapted to the demands of a Test match despite playing little to no red-ball cricket.

All-rounder Deepti Sharma, also making her debut, impressed with both bat and

She took three wickets in ing the big one of skipper Heather Knight. Deepti remained unbeaten in the first innings, and promoted to No. 3 in the second, she delivered with a gritty half-century.

Multi-day cricket is a rarity on India's domestic circuit. As for Tests, before Bristol, the Indian women had won three in a row (2006, Taunton; 2014, Wormsley and Mysuru).

India's heroics and the exciting cricket on all four days would surely have won new followers for the women's game. There is a pink-ball Test to come later in the year in Australia.

Captain Mithali Raj and Co. want to play more Tests. Certainly not at a rate of one in seven years.

West Indies skittled out for 149

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

Heavy morning showers resulted in the first session of the third day getting washed out as umpires called early lunch on Sunday in the second Test between West Indies and South Africa.

On the second day, South Africa's bowlers backed up a solid batting performance to put the Proteas in a command.

Kagiso Rabada, Lungi Ngidi and Anrich Nortje crashed through the West Indies' top and middle order while Wiaan Mulder took three wickets for one run to wrap up the tail as South Africa bowled out the home side for 149 in exactly two sessions. South Africa made 298 in its first innings. Shai Hope made 43 and Jermaine Blackwood scored 49.

The scores:

South Africa 298 vs West Indies 149 in 54 overs (Shai Hope 43, Jermaine Blackwood 49, Wiaan Mulder 3/1).

Italy topped its group in the European Championship after a third straight win on Sunday, with a first-half goal from Matteo Pessina giving it a 1-0 victory over 10-man Wales, which also advanced to the knockout stages of the competition.

The Italians had already guaranteed their progress, while Wales secured a berth by finishing ahead of Switzerland on goal difference. The Swiss, who could still advance as one of the four best third-placed teams, beat Turkey 3-1 in Baku.

Italy manager Roberto Mancini made eight changes to rest most of his firstchoice starters, but Italy still dominated and missed several chances either side of Pessina's 42nd-minute goal. Welsh centre back Ethan Ampadu was shown a straight red card in the 55th minute for stamping on Federico Bernadeschi's foot, and Wales then missed its best chance of an equaliser in the 74th when Gareth Bale volleyed over the bar from close range.

REUTERS LE CASTELLET

Red Bull's Formula One leader Max Verstappen overtook Mercedes rival Lewis Hamilton on the penultimate lap to win the French Grand Prix and canter 12 points

The victory from pole position at Le Castellet was a third in a row for Red Bull after street circuit wins in Monaco and Azerbaijan.

Verstappen's teammate Sergio Perez, winner in Baku after the Dutch driver suffered a high-speed blowout while leading, finished third after passing Valtteri Bottas in the closing laps.

Tyre strategy

Verstappen made two stops to Hamilton's one and then used his fresher tyres to hunt down his British rival. "We made the call to do

REUTERS SAN DIEGO

Perennial Major contender Louis Oosthuizen sank a monster eagle putt at the final hole to go into a threeway tie for the lead after the third round at the US Open on Saturday

The South African's downhill 50-footer slammed into the middle of the flag and toppled in to add another layer of fascination to what already was shaping up to be a compelling final round.

With a one-under-par 70, Oosthuizen joined Canadian Mackenzie Hughes (68) and steady American Russell Henley (71) at five-under 208.

But the three frontrunners did not have to look far over their shoulders to see heavyweights Rory McIlroy (67) and Bryson DeChambeau (68) waiting to pounce

Team MRF Tyres' Emil Lindholm and Reeta Hamalainen won the Pohjanmaa Ralli, the fourth round of the Finnish championship, on Saturday. The first win for MRF Tyres in the competition comes on the back of multiple podium finishes for Lindholm and Hamalainen. MRF Tyres' success here follows its maiden win in the Italian Gravel Championship earlier in the month.

"It is amazing to win here. This result shows the pace of development from the entire team at Team MRF Tyres and we should all be proud of our work," said Lindholm.

"Coming into the weekend, I was aiming for a good result but never dreamt of a victory. But the car and the tyres felt great all weekend. This rally is very fast, with some stages having an average speed of more than 120km/h. Today [Saturday], we took four stage wins and two-second places. It is a great result," added Lindholm.
